Stepping to the Side

by Bill Felker

Today has brought me where I've been before: just past the edge of summer, maybe just a handful of days past, but the subtle decays of early September have accumulated until the change seems sudden to me now. The rapid onset of color, the vague smoky tint of last week has quickly become clear and bright, streaking the maples.

Yesterday, I saw another long flock of grackles when I was on my way north of town. Every day on my drives, more birds.

In the garden, swallowtails and monarchs have disappeared. Asters are still at their peak, but the first beggarticks are brown now near the river: white snakeroot is finally breaking down in the woods.

When I look back at my notes for this particular day from previous years, I feel like I am returning, after a long absence, to a comfortable, familiar place. If I remain in that feeling, I can be suspended in this one location and time, outside of the turning of the Earth, outside of the sequence which ages me with one season after another, and which pulls me out of the here and now and this one day.

So I bask in this stasis and suspension of knowledge. I will die, after all, in the procession of days that follow one after another, along the straight road of some near or distant year. But if I stop now and step to the side, I hide the truth in the deception of the present.

Putney, VT Calling Adventurous Bikers to the 2018 West Hill Grinder

Sunday September 23 is the date for this year's West Hill Grinder, organized by the West Hill Shop in Putney, VT. The shop specializes in cycling and repairs, cross-country equipment and tuning, rentals, and boots and clothing.

Three different gravel-road biking loops will offer a variety of rural challenges for intermediate and advanced cyclists.

Routes ranging from 19-39 miles will wind through scenic Westminster, Dummerston, Brookline, and Putney on town dirt roads, Class-4 woods roads, and Windmill Hill Pinnacle Association hiking trails, with a bit of pavement here and there.

The "West-West" Loop is the easiest and shortest ride on packed dirt roads without technical challenges. There are bail-out points on all routes if a ride must be shortened.

Both the start (at 10 a.m. or 11 a.m., depending upon the route chosen) and finish will be at High Meadows Farm, 742 Westminster West Rd. in Putney, VT. The farm is again offering water, facilities, protected seating, and onsite parking.

Individual, student, and family rates for the event include a post-ride gourmet grinder buffet catered by the Putney Coop. Gluten-free and vegetarian options are available.

The 2018 Grinder is a fundraising thank-you from Diny and Jim Sweitzer, owners of the West Hill Shop, to the Windmill Hill Pinnacle Association for "creating and maintaining an incredible resource of trails in Putney, Westminster, Athens, Grafton, and Brookline and for renovating the cabin at the Pinnacle overlook." The Pinnacle Association's 25-mile trail system runs from Putney Mountain to Grafton.

For information on the routes, bike recommendations, equipment requirements, prices, and food, as well as registration, visit www.bikereg.com and search for West Hill Grinder. Or go to www.westhillshop.com/about/group-rides-pg103.htm.

For questions, call the West Hill Shop at (802) 387-5718 or email jim@westhillshop.com. The West Hill Shop's Facebook page will give updates on routes and announce any changes responding to weather conditions.

This adventurous gravel-road ride is a great way to see really different and beautiful sections of the area while supporting an organization that helps to conserve land and make many of the area's rural features accessible to hikers and bikers.

Remembering The Hurricane of '38

On the 80th anniversary of the Hurricane of '38 Steve Long will present how the '38 Hurricane transformed New England. The program takes place Thursday, September 13 at 7 p.m. at Union Hall in Newfane Village. It will explore how the hurricane brought about social and ecological changes that can still be observed these many decades later.

A hurricane will never surprise us again. But that's just what happened to the people of New England and Long Island on September 21, 1938. In 1938, not a single living person had ever experienced a hurricane in New England. The previous one had been so long before that people in the Northeast believed that hurricanes only happened down south—Florida, Texas, maybe North Carolina. Not Vermont. Then, without warning, the most destructive weather event to ever hit the Northeast blasted all the way through to Quebec.

On Long Island, and in Connecticut, and Rhode Island, the "Long Island Express" killed hundreds of people and destroyed roads, bridges, dams, and buildings that stood in its path.

Not yet spent, the hurricane then raced inland, maintaining 100 mile per hour winds into Vermont and New Hampshire and uprooted more than a half million acres of forest. It knocked down forests in patches large and small across a region totaling 15 million acres. City streets and rural roads were criss-crossed with a tangle of trunks and limbs, all of which had to be removed with axes and crosscut saws.

Steve Long is the founder of Northern Woodlands magazine and was its editor for 17 years. Copies of his book Thirty Eight: The Hurricane That Transformed New England (Yale University Press) will be available for purchase.

The program is sponsored by both the Historical Society of Windham County and the Moore Free Library.

Union Hall is located on West St. in Newfane Village. (802) 348-7891. info@historicalsocietyofwindhamcounty.org. www.historical societyofwindhamcounty.org

Way Back Then

A Child's Memory of a Devastating Storm

by Charles Sutton

The catastrophic Hurricane of September 21, 1938 claimed 600 lives throughout New England but thankfully our family escaped its wrath.

Even as young children my brother Fred and I (ages 8 & 7) thought it odd when a doctor came to our Timothy Dwight K-8 Grade School in Fairfield, CT, to give the children a quick check-over before we were taken or sent home. It was only noon.

The sky was very dark and the wind had picked up, making our half-mile bike ride home seem like fun although challenging. Mother told us a big storm was coming and she had already gotten out the kerosene lamps for when the lights would be bound to go out. The rains and a howling wind came swiftly, and by 3 p.m. my brother and I had made several trips to the attic with pots and pans to catch water leaking through the roof. A big chestnut tree near our front porch seemed to be swaying a worrisome bit too much. Between our dining and living rooms was a shortcut through a hall with high, small windows which my bother and I had to stand on tiptoe to look out of. There we witnessed the apple trees in our orchard being blown over or large limbs cracking off one after the other.

After World War I my father had bought this property which included an antique farmstead on two acres of land with a dozen apple trees and some pear, cherry and quince trees. This was the family home for the next 80 years.

Before the phone went dead Mother had talked to Father in New York City where he commuted for work. He said the trains into Connecticut were still running, but would be quite late, and that he would be on the one leaving Grand Central Station at 5 p.m. We had the only family car so he had to be picked at the Southport railroad station sometime around 7.

Mother got the handyman-gardener Frank to go with us. He was smart enough to put crosscut saws and an axe in the trunk of our four-door Pontiac sedan. There were many trees and power and phone lines down and lots of water on the roads on the way to the station. We had a long wait before the train finally came in.

The storm had passed, but it was very dark and downed trees, limbs, debris continually blocked our way home—some five miles away on Greenfield Hill. Father and Frank got out of the car several times to clear the road but one route after another was blocked by downed wires and trees. We finally got to the bridge at the bottom of Burr St., another possible way up a hill to our home. The stream, now a rampaging river and full of debris, was pouring over the bridge. A car ahead of us sped on through, dangerous as it was. We tried it next. The 1930s Pontiac, fortunately built high off the ground and with our extra weight was able to splash through the flooding river and on up Burr St. to our dark but welcoming home.

When we entered the stream I looked out the car's back window and saw the car behind us stalling mid-stream. I have wondered and worried to this day about what happened to the people in that car. That could have been us.

The Nature Museum's 10th Annual Fairy House Festival

Each year, The Nature Museum welcomes thousands of visitors from across Vermont, New England, and beyond to the Fairy House Festival, a family-friendly celebration of nature, creativity, inspiration, and community. The 10th Annual Fairy House Festival at The Nature Museum in Grafton, VT will welcome the fairies in our forests once more for this Grafton tradition on Saturday, September 29 and Sunday, September 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

With the final weeks of summer come the first signs of autumn: an unexpected cool breeze, a shock of bright yellow in the branches of a sugar maple, and the first few skeins of geese flying south. In the villages surrounding Grafton, residents may also feel the magical spark of fairy dust in the air.

Fairies afield

"The fairy magic is particularly strong this year," writes Carrie King, Executive Director of The Nature Museum. "I can feel it." For the tenth annual festival, King has seen an unprecedented level of engagement from the community: "The fairy houses are the stars of the show. Our fairy house trail invites festival guests on a magical walk in the woods, where our incredible volunteers have placed their unique creations to welcome the sprites, elves, and fairies of the forest. Fairy schools, fairy libraries, fairy pirate ships, and fairy hot air balloons... each year, we are thrilled and inspired by the inventive creations of our hardworking volunteers. The 2018 fairy house trail promises to be the most colorful and diverse collection of structures we've seen."

In the months leading up to the festival, volunteers for The Nature Museum have been pulling on their hiking boots and heading out the door, combing fields, streambanks, forests, and hilltops with a basket in hand. These volunteers have been foraging for moss, bark, pine cones, twigs, pebbles, acorns, and other natural materials. With these earthy ingredients, they will craft this year's fairy house village.

Natural materials will also be available at the festival, where the museum's gardens become a fairy house construction zone, and festival attendees young and old are able to create little homes, and leave them there overnight, for the garden fairies to nest in.

Building a village in the forest

Celia Bohannon of Saxtons River, who built fairy houses in her childhood and now creates them with her grandchildren for the museum's festival, recommends birch bark to new builders: "It's easy to find around here, on limbs or branches already on the ground. The bark can be sturdy or flexible, large or small, round or flat, white or shades of brown. A hot-glue gun works well on it, and you can even use a long sharp needle and invisible thread to attach decorations to it or fasten pieces together."

Kate DesLauriers, a Girl Scout Troop leader and mother from Chester who has been a volunteer for The Nature Museum for seven years, says her favorite material to work with is moss, which can fill in cracks and cover other materials.

Some structures are light-hearted and cozy, while others are spell-binding and intricate. Each fairy house is a reflection of its creator, celebrating the individuality among the volunteers who make the magic year after year.

Jeanne Waldren, Youth Services Librarian at the Whiting Library in Chester, first built a fairy house for the festival in 2012. An experienced volunteer, she has built dozens of fairy structures with her grandchildren and with the children at the Whiting Library over the years, sharing the creative process with the next generation. "The imagination can go wild," says Waldren. "Nothing is as exciting as picturing a place for the smallest creatures imaginable to get out of the rain and get a good night's sleep."

Ms. Waldren is working again with the kids at the Whiting Library to build a fairy structure for this year's festival. When asked if she had ever seen one of the fairies staying in her houses, she responded: "I haven't seen a fairy because they are so clever; but I have found the fairy dust left after their visit!"

Volunteers welcome to come and help

The Nature Museum welcomes volunteers to help at and before the festival, and donors to support the event, which is the Museum's biggest fundraiser of the year. Volunteers building fairy houses need to register by September 8, and space is limited. These volunteers also need to come the day before the festival to place their creation on the trail.

There is also an opportunity to build fairy houses at the festival in the gardens and anytime in your own neck of the woods.

Tickets can be purchased at www.nature-museum.org or at the fairy gate the day of the event. Adults are $10, seniors 64 and over are $8, and kids 3-17 are $4.

Poor Will's Daybook for September

by Bill Felker

September 1 – Squirrels shred Osage fruits in the woods. Rose of Sharon, which was bright from the Midwest to the Northeast a few weeks ago, has suddenly lost most of its flowers. Japanese knotweed petals darken and fall.

September 2 – The Blackberry Jam Moon enters its weak final quarter this evening. This is also the date of the September 2 weather system, but the moon's weak phase reduces its power.

September 3 – Lunar influence is expected to be low today through the 5th. Take advantage of this period to work with family, pets and livestock, family and clients.

September 4 – As the day moves to within a few degrees of equinox, sycamores, tulip trees, slippery elms, poplars, locust, elms, box elders, buckeyes, dogwoods, chinquapin oaks, lindens and redbuds may begin to show their autumn colors.

September 5 – Autumn apple picking has begun across the North, and the harvest is nearly half over for tobacco, tomato and potato growers in the South. Cottonwoods fade as the goldenrod turns and the soybean fields yellow.

September 6 – Kingbirds, finches, ruddy ducks, herring gulls and yellow-bellied sapsuckers move south. The last young grackles and hummingbirds leave their nests.

September 7 – The moon reaches perigee this morning, beginning a three-day period of strong lunar influence (from perigee, the September 8 cool front and new moon).

September 8 – Today is the average date for a significant high-pressure system to cross the Mississippi River and head for Vermont. Yesterday's perigee and tomorrow's new moon are very likely to strengthen this system. Expect precipitation as the front comes through. Near the Canadian border, night time temperatures will tumble into the 30s. Hurricanes are likely to come ashore in the Gulf or along the East Coast.

September 9 – The Jumping Jumpseed Moon is new at midday. Frost is more likely tonight and tomorrow night than any other times so far in the second half of the year. Berries are red on the silver olives, orange on the American mountain ash, purple on the pokeweed. Wild cherries have disappeared from their branches. Seed pods of the touch-me-not burst in the wind.

September 10 – The soybean harvest has begun across the northern half of the United States. Cobwebs are everywhere in the woods, and the number of butterflies swells in the gardens.

September 11 – The waxing moon favors the seeding of winter grains and green manure crops. Test the soil and make corrective lime and fertilizer applications for autumn plantings.

September 12 – Doves stop calling before dawn until February.

September 13 – August's boneset goes to seed as the corn silage harvest picks up speed. Aster bloom peaks. In the North, corn is denting, and the whole crop is mature in the South. The cutting of silage has taken over from the second and third cuts of hay; soybeans are turning as well as setting pods.

September 14 – Almost everywhere above the equator, people are digging potatoes, picking commercial and private tomato plants clean. The seasons for everbearing strawberries, plums, pears, water-melons and peaches begin in the North.

September 15 – The cold front that usually brings Early Fall to the Northern states today will be weakened considerably by the moon's position between new and full.

September 16 – The moon enters its gentle second quarter this evening. Between today and September 23, lunar influence will be at its lowest of the month, favoring relatively stable weather (but dry and warm conditions) and low stress.

September 17 – When the days are cool, the cicadas are quiet. On the colder nights, the katydids refuse to chant and the frogs are silent.

September 18 – Wood nettle seeds are black and brittle. Throughout the pastures, milkweed pods are ready to open. In the perennial garden, late-blooming hostas discard their petals.

September 19 – Great crested flycatchers, blue-gray gnatcatchers, ruby-throated hummingbirds, eastern wood peewees and bank swallows move south. The cobwebs that blocked summer paths become less common. The wingstem bows to sets its seeds.

September 20 – The moon reaches apogee after sundown, further weakening the power of the moon to influence the high-pressure system that usually crosses the nation near this date. On the other hand, lunar fortunes quickly reverse as the moon reaches the end of its second quarter (on September 24).

September 21 – In the northern half of the United States, the first tier of trees, including the ashes, cottonwoods, box elders, hickories and locusts, turns quickly after equinox.

September 22 – Today is equinox, the sun's halfway position between summer and winter. Poison ivy, sumac and Virginia creeper turn the fencerows red and gold.

September 23 – Precipitation is expected today as the September 24 cool front approaches and the moon becomes full.

September 24 – The full moon breaks the stability of middle September and brings the chance of frost to most of the Northern states and hurricane rains to the Southeast and Lower Midwest.

September 25 – Now as the moon wanes, put in spring bulbs, divide perennials, shrubs and trees.

September 26 – The sugar beet, pear, cabbage and cauliflower harvests commence near this date in the Great Lakes region. In Wisconsin, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Oregon and Washington State, the cranberry harvest begins as berries darken in the cooler weather.

September 27 – Monarch and swallowtail butterflies often become more numerous and visit the last flowers in the afternoon sun.

September 28 – Tree after tree joins in the collapse of year, some foliage turning color overnight. Aster blossoms start to disappear; their departure parallels leaf fall, the end of the insect season, the end of the spiderweb season and an acceleration in bird migration.

September 29 – The final cold front of September, still under the sway of the gibbous moon, is due to reach the Mississippi today. More signs to accompany the new chill: goldenrod flowers become tufted and gray.

September 30 – Milkweed pods burst. Most black walnut trees are bare. Crab apples are thinning. Color spreads across the maples.

A Vermont Almanack for Early Fall

Time of crisp and tawny leaves
And of tarnished harvest sheaves,
And of dusty grasses—weeds—
Thistles, with their tufted seeds

Phases of the Blackberry Jam Moon And the Jumping Jumpseed Moon

Among the many signs of approaching autumn, the maturing of the jumpseed plant is one of the more dependable. When its flowers have turned to brittle seeds, then the last tier of wildflowers starts to open throughout the country. White and violet asters, orange beggarticks and bur marigolds, late field goldenrod and zigzag goldenrod come into bloom, blending with the last of the purple ironweed, yellow sundrops, blue chicory, golden touch-me-nots, showy coneflowers and great blue lobelias.

September 2: The Blackberry Jam Moon enters its final quarter at 9:37 p.m.

September 7: The moon reaches perigee at 8:21 a.m.

September 9: The Jumping Jumpseed Moon is new at 1:01 p.m.

September 16: The moon enters its second quarter at 6:15 p.m.

September 20: The moon reaches apogee at 7:54 p.m.

September 24: The moon is full at 9:52 p.m.

The Sun's Progress

Autumn equinox occurs (and the Sun enters its Middle Autumn sign of Libra) at 8:01 p.m. on September 22. Within several days of that moment, the night is about 12 hours long almost everywhere in the continental United States.

The Planets

Mars in Capricorn and Saturn in Sagittarius move into the southern sky after sundown. Venus in Virgo is the giant evening star in the far west, Jupiter at her heels in Libra in the southwest.

The Stars

With Libra and Scorpio lost in the western horizon, Cygnus, the Northern Cross, with Deneb its brightest star, is a sky guide for autumn, moving slightly west from its central August position. Leading it on, just a little further west, is Lira and its major star, Vega. Below Cygnus lies Aquila and its keystone, Altair.

Meteorology

Weather history suggests that the cold waves of Early Fall usually cross the Mississippi River on or about the following dates: September 2, 8, 12, 15, 20, 24 and 29.

Tornadoes, hail, floods or prolonged periods of soggy pasture are most likely to occur in connection with tropical storms moving up the Atlantic coast, especially near lunar perigee, September 7, new moon on September 9 and full moon on September 24.

Healing: The Transformative Imagery of Art

The Great Hall in Springfield, VT, is celebrating Springfield Hospital's 105th Anniversary with the presentation of, "Healing: The Transformative Imagery of Art," a group exhibition of 12 artists. Drawing on personal, in some cases tragic experiences, these artists have created inspiring pieces to share with the viewer. The exhibition will open Thursday, September 27 and go through March 30, 2019 with an artists' reception for the public from 5:30-7 p.m. on September 27 at One Hundred River Street. Wine and light refreshments will be served.

The healing in art

Research confirms that viewing enjoyable or stirring art creates a surge of the feel-good chemical, dopamine, a chemical related to intense positive sensations. Additional health benefits include increased relaxation, inner calm and reduced stress.

In recent years, hospital leaders, physicians and patients have discovered that art and music in the hospital environment can help patients deal with their illnesses more effectively and possibly return to full functioning earlier.

Nina Jamison, Director of Exhibitions at the Great Hall says, "In creating this show, we were seeking art that has a positive impact and helps viewers rise above challenges, offering hope and inspiration. The 12 artists in the exhibition have used their creativity to provide a path forward towards healing for others, for the planet and for themselves."

"We also wanted to showcase various mediums including painting, sculpture, ceramics, stained glass, blown glass and fiber. The healing power of art is important now more than ever in the midst of worldwide turbulence, extremism and negativity."

New England artists

The exhibition features renowned New England artists including: painters: Robert O'Brien, Springfield, VT; Cai Xi Silver, Brattleboro, VT; Robert Carsten, Springfield, VT; sculpture: Pat Musick, Manchester, VT; Carolyn Enz Hack, E. Thetford, VT; Mary Admasian, Montpelier, VT, Margaret Jacobs-Enfield, NH; tiles, Ceramic Wall Art: Natalie Blake, Brattleboro, VT; Stained Glass, Karen Deets, Fair Haven, VT; blown glass: Robert DuGrenier, Townshend, VT; fiber, Priscilla Petraska, Chester, VT; and Neomi Lauritsen, Springfield, VT.

Nina Jamison comments about artist Pat Musick, "Pat's strong environmental esthetic and her iron willed spirit bring a sense of harmony to the Great Hall. Her extraordinary talent for transferring a quiet, harmonious peace that create a dialogue with the viewer is exemplified and celebrated."

In talking about her art, Pat Musick says, "My art is a reflection of the tensions that exist between man and the natural environment. I search for ways to create harmony and reconciliation both in the media and the content. Stone and wood speak for the physical world while rusted steel addresses human abuse of the environment. Through my work these conditions come together in a conversation of peace and spiritual quiet. In today's world so many of us cry out for such a healing."

About another artist, Margaret Jacobs, Nina says, "Bridging Native American culture and history with contemporary abstract art feels like a 'healing.' The viewer is moved by the boldness and strength of Jacobs's sculptures. Jacob's powerful, contemporary sculpture is definitely not the typical Cai Xi's Earth and Sky Series painting number 34 reflects her love of the beauty of the Vermont landscape. She says this series is an ongoing prayer for peace on Earth. This painting is in the "Healing: The Transformative Imagery of Art" exhibition at the Great Hall in Springfield, VT. Cai Xi is based in Brattleboro, VT. Visit her website at caixiart.com.

beadwork and birch craft one might associate with Native American art. Jacobs is one of the top 10 Native American artists in the country."

The Great Hall

With a soaring 25-foot ceiling and clerestory windows, the 150-foot-long by 45-foot-wide world-class public art space is unique in the region and accommodates and compliments very large artwork and sculpture. The Great Hall, located in the Springfield Medical Center can be entered from either River Street, across a pedestrian bridge, or from the Pearl Street entrance. There is plenty of parking at both entrances.

The Springfield Medical Center is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. when the Great Hall can be viewed. There are docents on Fridays from 1-4 p.m. They can explain the history of the building. A history display of the former Fellows Gear Shaper Factory is in The Great Hall.

The Great Hall will be open on Saturday and Sunday, October 13 and 14 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. as participants in Vermont's Statewide Open Studio weekend.

The exhibits at the Great Hall are sponsored by Springfield Regional Development Corporation and Springfield Hospital.

Pick Apples for a Cause During Hunger Action Month

September is National Hunger Action Month, and here in Vermont local apple orchards are teaming up with the Vermont Foodbank to give Vermonters a fun way to take action.

In partnership with sponsors, Target and Front Porch Forum, and 18 local apple orchards, the Vermont Foodbank is mobilizing groups and individuals throughout the state to pick apples for people facing hunger through the Pick For Your Neighbor Program.

During apple harvest season, the Vermont Foodbank encourages individuals, families, civic groups and businesses to visit participating apple orchards to pick and purchase extra apples for people struggling to afford healthy food. The fresh picked apples go to the Vermont Foodbank, which then distributes them to food shelves and meal sites throughout the state to provide to people in their local communities.

Since its inception, Pick for Your Neighbor has brought more than 100,000 pounds of fresh, local apples to Vermonters facing hunger.

An apple a day

“The impact you can have when you share healthy food with people is incredible,” says Vermont Foodbank CEO, John Sayles. “Many of the people served by the Foodbank struggle with health issues, so we are working hard to make sure all our neighbors have access to the fresh food they need to lead healthy lives. In this case, an apple a day really can keep the doctor away!”

Food insecurity is closely linked to health. According to Hunger in America 2014, 72% of the people served by the Vermont Foodbank report having to purchase inexpensive, unhealthy food because they could not afford healthier options. Hunger also coincides with diet-related illnesses, with 23% of Vermont Foodbank clients suffering from diabetes and 46% living with high blood pressure. By meeting the needs of Vermonters with fresh, nutritious foods, programs like Pick For Your Neighbor can help them achieve better health, lower health care bills, and a higher quality of life.

Pick for your neighbor

“All year long, we look forward to the harvest season and the bounty it brings our state,” says Sayles. “Spending a day picking apples with friends and family is always a highlight of season. This is a great opportunity to add a great cause to that experience. As you make your annual orchard visit, take a little extra time to pick a few apples for someone who doesn't always have access to the incredible fresh food our state has to offer.”

Each year businesses, civic groups, and community members have come together to participate. Last year Wood Chuck Hard Cider employees visited Champlain Orchards and picked 2,000 pounds of apples to donate. “This is a wonderful opportunity for businesses to offer their employees a fun team-building day while giving back to the community,” adds Sayles. “We encourage all businesses, civic groups, and community members to Pick For Your Neighbor this year!”

The Vermont Foodbank is the state's largest hunger-relief organization, providing nutritious food and promoting health through a network of 215 food shelves, meal sites, senior centers and after-school programs, and directly to families, children, older adults and individuals at schools and hospitals. In 2017, the Vermont Foodbank distributed nearly 12 million pounds of food to 153,100 Vermonters. The Vermont Foodbank, a member of Feeding America, is nationally recognized as one of the most effective and efficient nonprofits and food banks in the nation. Learn more at www.vtfoodbank.org.

Blue Skies, Colorful Days and Crisp Ripe Apples!

Indian Pudding With Apples

Scald two quarts of sweet milk. Stir in a cup of corn-meal. Stir until the mixture thickens. Remove from the fire. Add one and one-sixth cups of molasses, one teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon each of nutmeg and cinnamon, and two cups of sweet apples pared, cored, and quartered. Pour into a deep pudding dish and bake for four hours. When the pudding has baked for one and one-half hours, add without stirring one pint of cold milk. Finish baking and serve with cream and sugar or maple syrup.

Apple Slump

Pare, core, and quarter apples add a little water and sugar to taste. Stew until tender and cover with the following mixture; sift 1 pint of flour and 1 teaspoon of baking powder, add a pinch of salt, and 2 cups of milk, mix, and turn out onto a lightly floured board. Roll to a one-half-inch thickness and place over the stewed apples. Cover and cook for 10 minutes without lifting the lid. Serve hot with cream and sugar or a soft custard.

Clarified Apples

Make a syrup of 2 cups of sugar and 1 cup of water. Pare, core, and cut into sixths 6 large tart apples. Cook a few at a time in the syrup until clear remove and drain; add the rind and juice of one half lemon to the syrup boil until thick; remove the lemon rind and put over the apples.

The Apple Picker

On a limber ladder Bending in the breeze See the plucky picker Try the trembling trees.	In the sunlight glancing' On their branches tall, Merrily they're dancing, Do not let them fall!
Picking-bag on shoulder, Darting here and there, Ever growing bolder, Swinging in the air.	Tantalizing torments Almost out of reach, Tenderly you touch them As if egg or peach.
Pippin, Pearmain, Baldwin, King and Spy and Sweet, Spitzenbergh and Codlin, Never stop to eat.	Careful with the packing In the barrels neat, Nothing now is lacking, Here's a fruit complete!

Autumn Concerts at The Old Firehouse Stage

The Old Firehouse Crew up in Tinmouth is bringing back some long time favorites this fall, and a guitarist from England who hasn't been to Vermont before. All concerts are on a Friday at 7:30 p.m. (doors open at 7 p.m.) at the Old Firehouse in downtown Tinmouth, VT.

September 14—Guitarist Claude Bourbon from England. This French-born guitarist grew up in Switzerland where for a time he was classically trained. Now based in the UK, he has become a world-renowned player, highly acclaimed for his finger-picking style—plucking, picking and strumming at such speed that his fingers seem to appear just as a blur. His music utilizes strains of folk, western, jazz and blues through such melodic delights as the traditional English Dance, the hypnotic Rodrigo, and vocals that display his slightly gruff, world-weary voice.

September 28—Martin and Susanne Bring the Blues and Old-time American Music. Martin Grosswendt and Susanne Salem-Schatz make beautiful music together, presenting a delightful gumbo rooted in the blues and old-time traditions. Martin is internationally known for his mastery of pre-war blues and other southern traditional genres on guitar, banjo, and mandolin among others. Susanne is becoming known for her dynamic interpretations.

October 12—Cosy Sheridan Comes Back to Delight. Cosy Sheridan has been called "one of the era's finest and most thoughtful singer-songwriters." Her concerts are wide-ranging explorations of modern mythology, love songs for adults, contemporary philosophy for the thoughtfully-minded, and her signature parody on aging and women. Her lyrical dexterity is backed by her percussive bluesy guitar style. A New Englander by birth, Cosy tours all over the country.

October 26—Ireland comes to Tinmouth for an Evening with Extra Stout. Extra Stout will fill the Old Firehouse with its Irish singing, whistling and fiddling! This traditional Irish band brings raucous drinking songs, ballads of home and country; slow and haunting airs; and rocking reels, jigs and polkas. Six engaging vocalists lend their voices to great songs from Ireland's rich history, while skillfully playing a variety of instruments—guitars, fiddle, whistles, and drums.

Donation of $10 to $15 of which 90% goes to the musicians; the balance pays the town for the hall. Coffee, tea, and locally made treats for sale, provided by local groups.

The Old Firehouse is at VT Rt. 140 and Mountain View Rd. in downtown Tinmouth, VT. Try 8 Mountain View Rd., Tinmouth on your GPS if you aren't sure of the way. www.tinmouthvt.org/events. www.facebook.com/TinmouthOldFirehouseConcerts.

Memories Of Hot Summers Past

by Pamela Hayes Rehlen

This summer, when it was so scorching and humid that our 1840s house became a rich stew of faint scents, (the smell of hot dust and old wood, a whiff of long-ago pets—that singular summertime perfume) some particular memories of mine returned to mix the past with the present.

We had our annual Forth of July party, and several of the people who've come for decades stayed home. Everyone who braved the heat wound up sitting out under the trees in a big circle of assorted summer chairs, eating and talking until afternoon crept into dusk, then into soft, mosquito-filled, darkness.

That morning, I'd gone out and settled down in a secluded spot between our porch columns, the spot where I settle down every year to watch Castleton's Fourth of July parade.

First, I saw The Governors Institute on the Arts, kids dressed in white, hooting, chattering, making Brazilian-rain-forest sounds, running, slashing, and swirling multi-colored plastic banners, a chaotic anarchy that brought to mind the rabble-assault on the Bastille. But they were tempered by a following vanguard of law and order elements, the Castleton police force and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"The mothers led a group of kids on wagons and scooters and little bicycles decorated with American Flags."

Young mothers pushing strollers and leading toddlers grouped together under the trees at the edge of the parade route. They exchanged PTA and pediatrician-type information and regularly shouted commands, "Conner, I can see you. Stop that now."

Later, the mothers led a school group made up of kids on wagons and scooters and little bicycles decorated with American flags.

About half way through the parade, I heard distant, but steadily-approaching, drums and pipes. This was battle re-enactors. When thrilling-music regiments like this one turned up in little Vermont towns, it's no wonder they had little trouble rounding up boys to join them and go off to war.

The grave-faced, horse-empire O'Rourke men rode by with their flags, like medieval knights in Stetsons. And then there was a Cassella truck hauling the Lake Bomoseen Association's new weed harvester with a DJ up on top of this behemoth rig blasting out a pounding, joyful, "I'm proud to be an American. God bless the USA."

After it was all over, I stayed sitting on the porch watching people drifting away, and I thought back to the evening the San Francisco Ragazzi boys' chorus came to Castleton to sing at the Federated Church across the street. I'd gone over to see the church filled, even the balcony filled—something I've only experienced a few times in my life.

The boys sang selections from Handel and Schubert, but near the end of the program they spread out across the sanctuary, in front of the pulpit, and danced and sang "Put a Little Love in Your Heart." The church hadn't felt that full of joyous energy since, maybe, the fifties.

Afterward, the deaconate set up long tables outside and served cookies, cake, and make-your-own-sundaes. Much later, because it was too hot to sleep, I sat out and listened to the little boys, now in T-shirts and shorts, small ghostly shapes running back and forth on the town green, close to the church graveyard, filling the humid darkness with wild cries.

One summer, the Castleton select board voted to buy

American flags to hang on the utility poles along Route 4, and my son, a member of the select board at that time, volunteered to put up some of them. I was driving home from Fair Haven when I spotted his truck parked by the side of the road. I saw that he'd set a chair on the truck bed and had with him Matt Wade, a dry-waller friend who was working for us that summer. I couldn't figure out at first what was going on.

My son, holding an armful of flag, had climbed on the chair. He was straining up toward the utility pole, but there was a breeze that day so he couldn't manage to attach the bulky moving flag, and Matt had gotten behind to steady him.

I didn't think he would have much interest in seeing his mother at this moment of difficulty, so I just drove slowly past watching the two of them struggling together to raise the flag, moved by what a stirring sight it was, like the Marines lifting the Stars and Stripes at Iwo Jima.

One July 4th, the Castleton Corners realtors—there used to be several of them doing a seemingly lively business in offices at the Corners—bought what must have been bales of miniature American flags.

I remember returning to town from our cottage early in the morning on the Fourth of July, and there were the realtors' flags. They started along the road in Hydeville, marched around the Hydeville green, continued through Castleton Corners.

They took a little break, and then began again in Castleton Village—tiny, bright, fluttering, flags dancing along the edge of the road as far as I could see.

Even now, remembering, it takes my breath away.

"Coming Along" In Vermont

The time we lived there on the road
That clumb the Pierson Peak divide,
And worked the farm great-grandpa cleared
Which run clear up Ascutney's side,
The nicest folks would "come along,"
The nicest folks, year after year,
And you can't make me say I'm wrong
Although they acted kinder queer.

Come Happy Smith, for old times' sake,
I want to hear your mellow song;
Come Love-cracked Ann and Old Levake,
I want to see you "come along."

They didn't have no hawse or cart,
They hoofed it, like as 'twas a treat;
But where they come from, where they went—
We never asked about their "beat:"
We never missed a thing, not one,
And yet we sorter watched 'em, too,
For they had eyes that beat a gun
For shooting right straight into you.

Old Happy Smith had books and soap,
I've seen a "Scottish Chiefs" today
We got from him in fifty-six
And it's too good to throw away;
A shaving soap-box, let me add,
He gave me once, of shiny tin,
The only box I'd ever had
To put my little playthings in.

He liked our house for Sabbath stops,
And in the evening, I declare!
He'd find some schoolhouse door unlocked
And start a Gospel meeting there;
My gracious! how that Smith could sing,
It shook the desks—and how his face
Would lighten up like everything,
The only candle in the place.

Come Happy Smith, for old times' sake,
I want to hear your saintly song;
Come Love-cracked Ann and Old Levake,
I want to see you "come along."

Old Love-cracked Ann she'd warm a mug
Of cider on the fireplace coals
And eat it with some johnnycake,
Then wash the floor or card some rolls—
She never sponged—and then she'd show
Her 'gagement rings; one, two and three,
And tell about a grand bateau
And dark man bounding o'er the sea.

And old Levake of Latin blood,
Or mebbly Injun, gone astray,
He always paid for what he had
By mending baskets half a day;
His head and hands was full of snap,
He fixed the clock once so 'twould run,
Then took his shilling, raised his cap
And trudged into the setting sun.

Come Happy Smith, for old times' sake,
I want to hear your happy song;
Come Love-cracked Ann and Old Levake,
I want to see you "come along."

Country Woman

Have you picked up a quince to smell it
And thought of grape jam on cellar shelves,
Of honey, brown eggs in water glass,
Of the braided bulbs of garlic and onion
Hung from the rafter?

There is sage and bay in the autumn wind,
There are apples that have not dropped from the bough,
Red withering brown in the smoke and the haze.
The cows are slow to pull at the frost-grey grass;
There was ice on the pond last night.

The city is miles away.
The quince in your hand
Is warm as a grandmother's cheek.

Vermont Wild Author Signs TV Contract

Geoffrey Sharp, a Hollywood producer/director, whose work has appeared on the National Geographic network and earned an Emmy nomination, has been granted the exclusive right to bring the popular "Vermont Wild, Adventures of Fish and Game Wardens" stories to television.

"I'm very happy Mr. Sharp reached out to me," Author Megan Price said of her agreement with the Hollywood executive, signed this August. "Mr. Sharp has a proven track record of writing, producing and directing for television as well as movies. He has the skills to make this happen."

Vermont Wild is a five volume book series of mostly humorous, but occasionally harrowing, true retired game warden stories. "Humor is the common thread throughout the stories," Price noted, "Even the ones where the wardens come close to getting themselves killed. That's what makes these stories sing."

Price began collecting and writing warden encounters with hungry bears, angry moose, reluctant hunting dogs and endless wily poachers a decade ago, at the urging of friend and retired warden

Eric Nuse of Johnson. Nuse's stories fill the first volume.

When volume one was released, it was an immediate hit with rural readers, starved for true stories of the natural world. "I knew there had to be more stories out there, more wardens with experiences deserving to be shared," Price said. "I have come to believe their stories are more than entertainment. They are an important slice of Vermont's history."

With five volumes released to date, any network choosing to make a TV series based on Vermont Wild will have close to 100 stories from which to create future shows.

"That is a tremendous asset for any network considering developing a TV series," Price noted. "But the bottom line for me is, to have Mr. Sharp believe, as I do, these stories could make great television and deserve to be brought to life in that way, for millions to see, is a great compliment. Will it happen? We'll have to wait and see."

Find Vermont Wild at all independent Vermont bookstores, Kinney Drugs and gift shops statewide. Order online at VermontWild.com and the books will be mailed to you.

30th Annual Vermont Sheep & Wool Festival

Plan to visit the The 30th Annual Vermont Sheep & Wool Festival on the weekend of September 29th & 30th at the Tunbridge Fairgrounds in Tunbridge, VT. You will enjoy the classic setting amidst the rolling hills of Vermont during the height of Fall Foliage.

The mission of the Vermont Sheep & Wool Festival is to showcase small farmers and handcrafters, with an emphasis on those businesses which grow and create with natural fibers.

Vendors include farmers and artisans

Central to the Festival is a marketplace of vendors, including farmers and artisans, offering natural fibers for handspinning and felting, yarns, patterns, needles & hooks, buttons, books and dyes. Also on offer will be a wide variety of equipment and supplies for spinning, weaving, knitting, crocheting, felting and other fiber arts. Handcrafted garments, accessories and household items will be available along with baskets, soaps and other handmade and farm raised products.

The Fleece Show & Sale will highlight top quality fleeces from a variety of animals. Licensed local farm producers will feature meat, cheese and more.

Stop by the Animal Barn to see the sheep, goats, llamas, alpacas and angora rabbits. This is a great opportunity to talk directly to producers about raising fiber animals.

The Cashmere Goat Association will hold its 2018 CGA North American Cashmere Goat Show in the fairgrounds' Riverside Barns. The Floral Hall features a variety of demos and "drop-in" fiber crafting sessions, as well as the contests and fleece sale. This year the Festival hosts an amazing exhibit, "Sheep Breeds: A World of Difference", from John Crane Studio. The display showcases 71 different breeds of sheep and their fiber.

Fiber arts classes and workshops

Fiber arts classes take place beginning Thursday, September 27th, at the Tunbridge Town Hall and will include spinning, felting, knitting, dyeing, weaving, basketry and rug hooking. Our featured instructor this year is Jillian Moreno, author of Yarnitecture: A Knitter's Guide to Spinning: Building Exactly the Yarn You Want.

For those interested in showing off their skills, this year's Not-Just-Fiber-Arts contests will offer a chance to compete for ribbons and prizes. Our contest theme is: "30 years of the Vermont Sheep & Wool Festival celebrating animal husbandry and agriculture in Vermont." Contest rules and entry forms are on the website.

Shepherd workshops and vendor demonstrations allow vendors, farmers and fiber artists the chance to share their knowledge and skills. These talks and demos are free and offered throughout the weekend. Visit the website for a full schedule.

The Chandler Center For the Arts Offers Stellar Entertainment

2018-2019 Season

The Chandler Center for the Arts in Randolph, VT has announced the most ambitious and far-reaching season of performances in the 111-year history of the historic music hall and gallery. Chandler's MainStage, Upper Gallery, and Student Series will feature 40+ performances of powerful storytelling, bluegrass, country, classical, blues & more.

Country music

The Chandler Music Hall MainStage kicks off on Friday evening, September 7th, with Del McCoury's outfit—the reigning kings of bluegrass and the music's most awarded band of all time. Grammy-winning troubadour Rodney Crowell checks in later in the month on September 22nd, revisiting many of his 15 #1 country hits in a stripped down acoustic setting. Other upcoming, standout Music Hall performances in the country, bluegrass, and Americana arena include Vermont's own honky tonk heroes, The Starline Rhythm Boys on November 3rd; four-time Country Music Association "Female Vocalist of the Year" Lorrie Morgan in a special tribute to firefighters on Saturday, December 1st; and progressive/contemporary bluegrass and string band sounds featuring The Seldom Scene on April 12th; and Della Mae on May 3rd.

The wildly eclectic cult band Donna the Buffalo weaves together a soulful mix of Cajun, zydeco, rock, folk, reggae, and country to stir up its own, singular Americana musical stew on December 15th.

Blues, soul, gospel and jazz

Blues, soul, gospel and jazz music have their say on the Music Hall stage beginning with guitarist Jorma Kaukonen and bassist Jack Cassidy—the fearsome, longtime duo known as Hot Tuna on October 11th. Randolph-born R&B and soul chanteuse Myra Flynn will bring her hot, emotionally charged, full band FLYNN back home to Chandler on October 13th. The Campbell Brothers serve up gospel as you've never heard it before, backed not by an organ or piano, but by the wailing, growling, shouting, singing sound of the pedal and lap steel guitars on February 1st. Veteran New England bluesman Ronnie Earl—a three-time Blues Music Award winner as Guitar Player of the Year—brings his ace band The Broadcasters to Chandler on February 9th for a fiery evening of electric blues, evoking such masters as Muddy Waters, B.B. King, and Stevie Ray Vaughan. On March 23rd, The New Black Eagle Jazz Band returns to Chandler with the high-spirited sounds of traditional New Orleans.

Holiday fare

Chandler will mark two holidays with two wildly divergent events. First up is a moving, thought-provoking, bridge-building evening of storytelling and theater, The Telling Project, presented on November 10th, the eve of Veterans Day. The Chandler production of The Telling Project will mark Veterans Day by featuring nine central Vermonters sharing their own, personal narratives of service, spanning the years from the Vietnam War to the present-day conflicts in the Middle East.

St. Patrick's Day weekend in 2019 brings the much-anticipated return on March 16th of Celtic fiddling sensations Natalie MacMaster, her husband, Donnell Leahy, and their high-energy, family-based troupe of musicians and folk dancers.

Folk music

2019 marks the 100th anniversary of the birth of Pete Seeger. The Vanaver Caravan, one of America's most celebrated folk music and dance troupes, pays homage to its longtime friend and mentor, in a concert entitled "Turn, Turn Turn" on October 19th.

Fans of great songcraft will appreciate the All in a Family tour, featuring an evening of thoughtful songs and familial harmonies with Loudon Wainwright III, Suzzy Roche, and Lucy Wainwright Roche on March 29.

Classical performances

Classical music has always been a part of Chandler's programming. This season features The Vermont Symphony Cellist Matt Haimovitz will be performing at Chandler Music Hall in Randolph, VT on October 6th & 7th.

Orchestra in their annual "Made in Vermont" concert on September 29th. The Opera Company of Middlebury presents Donizetti's "L'elisir d'amour" on October 14th. Cellist Matt Haimovitz performs the Bach Cello Suites and a selection of commissioned, contemporary overtures to Bach during two-days of "pop-up" performances and a MainStage recital on October 6th and October 7th. One of today's most critically acclaimed ensembles, the Borromeo String Quartet, brings the music of Haydn, Beethoven, and Ligeti to Randolph for a Sunday matinee performance on December 9th. Pianist Simone Dinnerstein, a longtime Chandler friend and collaborator, returns with a program featuring works by Couperin, Glass, Satie, and Schumann on May 4th.

Family fare

The annual Chandler Daytime Performance Series features events presented especially for schools, students, and families. All five events in the series—two stage plays, a black-light puppet theater masterpiece, a musical theater adaptation, and a kid-friendly opera—originated as great works of literature. They include the New Rep Theater's adaptation of George Orwell's Animal Farm on October 25th; Viva la Musica Opera Company's presentation of O'Henry's classic holiday tale, The Gift of the Magi on December 6th; charming puppetry with Mermaid Theater of Nova Scotia and The Very Hungry Caterpillar & Other Eric Carle Favorites on January 10th; Vermont Pride Theater with its adaptation of the young adult novel M or F? on January 25th; and Lucy Maud Montgomery's classic Anne of Green Gables, in a musical theater production featuring the ArtsPower ensemble on May 2nd. The performances are all at 10 a.m.

Live & Upstairs

Chandler presents its "Live & Upstairs!" series of acoustic music and other performances in the intimate confines of the Upper Gallery on a monthly basis. Five performances have been scheduled and more are being added. The series kicks off with Vermont-raised classical guitarist Christopher Schoelen on Saturday, October 20th, then continues with American roots master Darol Anger & the Furies on November 9th. Seasonal fare for the holidays and solstice with Rani Arbo & Daisy Mayhem performing on December 8th; a cappella jazz for lovers and Valentine's Day with Maple Jam on February 15th; and the Celtic-inspired folk of Low Lily is coming on April 26th.

For something different come see Vitaly: An Evening of Wonders. The master illusionist performs on October 27th. And don't miss The Ladies of Laughter: Funny & Fabulous on April 6th.

Two great Chandler seasonal favorites are coming again this season: The Mini-Mud Youth Variety Show on March 8th; and The Mud Season Variety Show on March 22nd.

Tickets for the season are now on sale. Call the Chandler box office, weekdays 12-4 p.m., at (802) 728-6464. Or visit the box office 71-73 Main St. in Randolph, VT.

Burr of All Trades...

by Burr Morse

Here I am in my dotage, actually thinkin' of hangin' up th' old Husqvarna. Yup, the other day I went out and cut a medium sized rock maple. It should've been a simple job but "Murphy's Law", coupled with Murphy's cousin, Stupidity, settled in at the first pull of the starter cord. The tree's lean spoke "eastward ho" to me but "west" quickly won out. And that hardwood change of heart lodged my trusty Husky tightern'a, well, chainsaw in a bench vise. After several trips back to the shop for logging paraphernalia enough to "persuade" a giant sequoia, I finally succeeded in freeing the saw. Unfortunately the rock maple still stood upright, embraced by the limbs of his neighboring hemlock. At that point, even though my genius woodsman friend Paul Cate has repeatedly told me not to do it, I proceeded to buck off 18 inch sections from the upright tree.

Any chance that we could just pick this thing up and point it the other way...

Now one might think that dropping a whole tree a foot and a half at a time would quite quickly free it from a neighboring hemlock's embrace but remember, Murphy's still in complete control! Only after a trailer load of 18-inch sections had come off Tootsie Roll style and the tree was reduced to only a slender top, did it finally fall over. Following that level of "success", this fool found himself slightly dazed and crawling out from under a wicked tangle of rock maple branches. And then for the pièce de résistance, this same fool, in the process of cutting up a mere smidgen of limb wood, proceeded to saw directly into one of his steel logging tools, ruining a brand new chain...enough!

In the name of "winding down" in my dotage, in fact, I've been thinking about golf; not golf, mind you, with greens and fairways and folks in sharp clothing but "farm boy golf". It's a new and revolutionary game invented by "yours truly". Here's how it works: Every pickup truck has a ball hitch. Every trailer has a ball receptacle (meets the "golf" theme so far, right?) and every farm boy is a veritable pro at backing and hitching. Farm boy golf's object is for the player, in the cab of a pickup, to back up to the trailer using only his mirrors. If he happens to land his ball hitch directly under the trailer receptacle on first try, It's a hole in one. Repeated tries bring eagles, birdies, pars and bogeys.

My good friend and fellow "Woodchuck Vermonter" Ed Hartman really liked my new game. He recently wrote a letter with his frustrations, however: "I am hooked on farm boy golf and I can't afford it. My nice truck, only ten years old, is full of tailgate dents from various trailer tongues." He went on, "I can't afford a new tailgate and I sure as #@%& will not put a silver one on which is the only extra I have."

Burr Morse (in the middle) taking down a giant maple in Montpelier, VT.

Ranting on about beefing up bumpers and the like, he ended by asking how I am at welding.

Well folks, I've done my share of welding but never ended up honing my skills any more than I honed my chainsaw act. Yup, it may be time to hang up the Husky and put away the welding rods but I gotta do something to keep busy like, say, farm boy golf. I can picture being in tournaments at farm field days and county fairs all over the country. I'll be competing to a golf announcer's hushed tone: "Burr Morse tee's off...mirror image perfect. He's in low range and he creeps back. His 'address' is impeccable...perfect alignment and approach!...oooooh, trouble here on the fairway. That's a nasty tailgate ding...doesn't look good for Morse!"

And so goes life. Most folks my age look forward to a long and fulfilling retirement. I suppose this old guy is no exception but I ain't-a-going to do it traditionally. My house'll still be heated with wood, split and delivered wood which I'll stack myself. Yup...can't imagine life without a good woodpile close by. And as for my recreation, there'll never be any green fees for this boy. Nope, I've already paid my fees for farm boy golf and I'm getting' better all the time. FORE!

Stories and Lessons of the Undersea World

In these days of climate disruption we hear startling things about the condition of the largest part of our planet—the ocean. There is so much to learn about fish, sea creatures, and the briny deep. Here are a few engaging books that tell stories ranging from a boy's failing goldfish to a friendly shark, whales old and whales large, and all manner of glorious undersea creatures in exquisite drawings.

When little boy Arthur's pet red fish Leon is sick and also seems to be dying from boredom, his mommy suggests Arthur must give him a poem. A poem? What's that? So begins the poetic quest of This Is A Poem That Heals Fish by Jeann-Pierre Simeon ($16.95. Enchanted Lion Books. www.enchantedlionbooks.com), a wonderfully sensitive seek-and-find experience for all of us. The determined Arthur asks his neighbors, his grandmother, and his grandfather what a poem is. Remarkable drawings accompany the boy's journey making each reply even more mystical, and yes, poetic. The bicycle repairman says "a poem is when you are in love and have the sky in your mouth." The baker Mrs. Round says, "a poem" is like hot fresh bread—"When you eat it, a little is left over." The neighbor Mahmoud, who comes from the desert and waters his rhododendrons every morning at 9 o'clock says "a poem is when you hear the heartbeat of a stone." Grandfather suggests "a poem, well...it's what poets make—even the poets do not know themselves." Other answers are as baffling including Grandma's comment, "poets turn words around, even upside down."

Arthur reports his findings to Leon his fish who awakes and speaks for the first time, in tune with the other answers: "Then I am a Poet, Arthur...and my poem is my silence."

"I see," replies the grateful, wiser little boy. The author, Jeann-Pierre Simeon and illustrator, Olivier Tallec of this contemplative story are both French. It is Simeon's second children's book while Tallec has illustrated over 40 books for children.

Being a small child everything seems big, too big, maybe sometimes enormous. We find out what the biggest thing in the ocean is in the non-fiction picture book, The Blue Whale by Jenni Desmond ($17.95. Enchanted Lion Books. www.enchantedlionbooks.com). One double-page spread alone shows 50 children (not scarey at all) sitting on a blue whale's tongue that weighs three tons. The children also see that the top of the whale's mouth is lined with 300-400 baleen plates made of a black fingernail-like material. To eat, the blue whale takes huge mouthfuls of a tiny shrimp-like creature called krill which are filtered out of the seawater through the baleen plates. Whales eat 35 million krill a day. More fascinating information about this giant whale is passed on through spectacular drawings comparing the whale's bigness to the child's smallness. The book is both fun and full of surprising information about this wonderful creature.

The blue whale may be ocean's largest mammal, but the ocean is also the home to other huge creatures as well as some of the tiniest, micro-creatures. Their large and minute details are magnified into some hard-to-imagine spectacular drawings in Secrets of the Sea by Kate Baker and illustrated by Eleanor Taylor ($24.99. Big Picture Press, an imprint of Candlewick Press. www.candlewickpress.com).

There you will meet Giant Tube Worms, Giant Pacific Octopus (arms 13 feet long) and the 440-pound Giant Clam. For more of the fascinating 'things' in five areas of seas see: In The Shallow—coconut octopus, European lobster and horseshoe crab; Forest of the Sea—giant kelp, purple sea urchin and tiny diatoms; Coral Gardens—pygmy sea horse, bubble coral shrimp and queen parrotfish; The Wide, Wide Blue—the blue dragon and man-of-war, sea butterfly and sea angel; and Into the Deep—swordtail squid, atolls jelly and radiolarian ooze. For readers intrigued by the microscopic life forms in this planet you will learn about cyanobacteria, zooxanthellae, foraminifera, moon jelly, sea sparkle, galaxy coral, and more.

The Ice Age in New England retreated some 17,000 years ago making a basin that allowed the Atlantic Ocean to flood inland and create an expansive lake (full of sea life including whales) that comprised the present-day Lake Champlain and the land on which the cities of Montreal and Ottawa now stand. Imagine finding the bones of a whale in Vermont! How did they get here? Children are bound to enjoy this story of how the bones of one of those whales was discovered in Charlotte, VT in Charlotte's Bones—A Beluga Whale in a Farmer's Field by Erin Rounds and illustrated by Alison Carver ($17.95. Tilbury House Publishers. www.tilburyhouse.com). A crew building a railroad line in Charlotte, VT, in 1849 uncovered the whale's skeleton. Fortunately the bones were retrieved, studied, and the skeleton was put back together, and it was named Charlotte. It is housed today in the Perkins Geology Museum at the University of Maine. Charlotte's life and surroundings are beautifully told in song-like verse and illustrated in this handsome book. An unusual example of "Save the Whales."

For a different and humorous take on how the seafood chain usually works imagine what tasty food minnows must be to a hungry shark in Nugget & Fang: Friends Forever—or Snack Time? by Tammi Sauer and illustrated by Michael Slack ($12.99. Houghton Mifflin Harcourt. www.hmhc.com). Here's a thriller where the minnow Nugget goes to Minnow School only to learn that sharks' food includes minnows, rusty license plates and surfers. What shall Nugget do? Fang the shark is his best friend! In the action-packed large-sized boardbook rescue thriller that follows, see how Fang proves that minnows (a school of 10 plus Nugget) can be his friends, not food. The large, colorful drawings will captivate you, and you'll be sure Fang could be your friend, too.

Book Review by Charles Sutton

Foraging, Harvest, Feast — A Wild-Inspired Cuisine —

We know weeds grow well in cities, along parkways and empty lots, even out of cracks in the sidewalks and streets. They are also often good to eat, so writes Marie Viljoen in Forage, Harvest, Feast ($40, Chelsea Green Publishers. www.chelseagreen.com), an encyclopedic book on wild plants. The author—transplanted from the South African countryside to urban Brooklyn, NY, shows how to find plenty of so-called weeds to forage and turn into things to eat or drink.

As a youngster she collected wild watercress and mushrooms, but in her early teens the botanical world became a passion, and she writes, "I paid fascinated attention to whatever was growing at my feet, wherever I was."

When she later moved to an apartment in Brooklyn, she found its backyard overrun with Quickweed, one of some 36 so-called weeds featured in this 470-page encyclopedic masterpiece.

She may have pulled Quickweed out by the bushy then, warning that "it is gardeners' formidable enemy, called quick because it germinate and grows while your back is turned." But under the control of a cook, the weed actually is delicious, much like lambs quarters and amaranth.

Several of her choice plants are also considered pests. Among those getting a bad rap are Wisteria, "known to twine around anything vertical, shading other plants sometimes girding and killing less robust species"; also the tenacious but sweet-smelling Honeysuckle, another strangler; and Garlic Mustard considered one of the most destructive invasive plants in North America.

Marie has plans for them including a Roasted Pork Rib Stew with Garlic Mustard; Honeysuckle Sea Bass Burger with Sweetfern Butter; and Wisteria and Chickpea Salad, and fluffy Wisteria pancakes. Anyone who has been plagued by burdocks—"a weed that generates a flurry of tenaciously lockjaw and persistent seed capsules (their hook-and-loop design inspired the invention of Velcro in 1950s England)"—may wonder why anyone would want to eat any part of such a plant.

However, my older brother Fred, a budding naturalist, used to harvest and prepare burdock root for the family. Marie is right—it tastes like artichoke heart and Jerusalem artichoke with both its taproot and immature stem being edible.

Marie warns that some indigenous wild plants like fiddleheads and ramps (also known as wild leeks) are now so recognizable that their habitats are being abused. She notes that if only 10 percent of a ramp patch is harvested it takes 10 years to recover because they grow painfully slowly.

Cattails, another surprising wild plant we see growing all over the place, can be eaten from nose to (cat) tail, and she writes "In Brooklyn I have collected cattail hearts and pollen, watched with mild interest by tourists and completely ignored by New Yorkers." She gives instructions to collect and prepare Cattail parts: buds, laurels, hearts, male flowers and pollen, with a cautionary note not to harvest the plants from contaminated marshlands. A dozen recipes are offered including Cattail Clam Chowder; Pan-Fried Scallops with Cattail Pollen, and White Sweet Clover and Cattail Muffins and Biscuits.

As a final note one can tell that Marie really loves to find and prepare wild plants. She pays homage to all this free, wild food with her thoughtful and sometimes amusing writing and her beautiful photographs. Hers is a wild-inspired cuisine.

Apples

Sixty Classic and Innovative Recipes for Nature's Most Sublime Fruit

by Christophe Adam

($25. Rizzoli International Publications, Inc., www.rizzoliusa.com)

This apple season again will be challenging home cooks and chefs to prepare something new and tasty, and more than the usual, although delicious, apple pie, sauce and jellies.

French pastry chef-cookbook author Christophe Adam meets this challenge with 60 enticing apple recipes of which many of you will say "I've got to try that" especially after seeing the colorful, mouth-watering, full-page illustrations.

Our chef-author has made eclairs a specialty at his eight pastry boutiques called Le'Eclair de Genie (literally, "a stroke of genius") which also serve chocolate bars, spreads and chocolate candies. There are six of these boutiques in Paris and several located throughout Asia. They feature upscale, "easy to eat nibbles for people-on-the-go." That is, for people who find themselves in Paris or Asia (it could happen).

Previous to opening the boutiques Adam was in charge of operations for Fauchon patisseries in France as well as New York, Moscow, Beijing, Dubai and other foreign cities.

Christophe Adam's is a stellar world but fortunately he shares his discoveries with us. A good example is Apple Pizza covered with a caramel glaze and topped with very thin slices of Granny Smith or Golden Delicious apples. Another eye catcher is Iced Apple—a scooped out Granny Smith filled with apple sorbet, described as "a dessert for all seasons." You'll want to try his Apple Upside-Down Eclairs—a combination of Madagascar vanilla cream, Choux pastry, caramel glazed apples, and hazelnut streusel.

For something even more original consider his Apple Burger—layers of apple, burrata cheese, and jellied raspberries between a roll made of French brioche. The apples used are Pippins, Granny Smith, or the large Chantecler, a popular French dessert apple now found in some supermarkets.

This cookbook gives recipes for these pastries and other treats including Vanilla and Granny Smith Eclairs, Apple Upside-Down Eclairs, Apple Barlettes, Apple-Pecan Chocolate Bars and various Tarts and Tartlets.

Adam introduces the reader to 37 varieties of apples with details about their flavor, history, and their best use. To make sure one uses the right apple for a particular recipe, the book arranges the apple recipes according to crunchy, crisp, soft, smooth or liquid.

You may want to try Hungarian Apple Soup which is popular in that country served both hot or cold. The recipe calls for very tangy apples: Belle de Boskoop, Braeburn, and Reinette Grise du Canada or Granny Smith. Another tempting dish is Apple Soup under a Pastry Crust—flavored with vanilla bean, orange and lemon zest, some fresh raspberries, and apple brandy (Calvados).

We learn some new combinations for apples in salads: Apples and Orange Salad in Red Wine; Poached Apple Salad; and Refreshing Apple Salad with Vanilla-Scented Olive Oil.

Apples are also used in making cakes with Adam introducing us to Apple Cheesecake, Apple Clafoutis (a pancake batter over fruit) with Pecan Praline and Caramelized Pecans, Apple-Calvados Cake, Apple-Maple Syrup Cake, and Apple, Rhubarb, and Polenta Cakes.

The book has many surprises. Top of the list could well be Adam's Apple Caviar. Caviar? Yes, he has created little green caviar-looking jellied drops used to decorate desserts, tapas, or any dish of your choice. The 'caviars' are created out of grape-seed oil, sugar, agar-agar powder and Granny Smith apple puree.

Recently Adam has become juror on the French TV show Qui Sera le Prochain Grand Pâtissier? (Who'll be the Next Great Pastry Chef?) He is also a culinary consultant and an inventor of new pastries, many presented in this book. Lucky for us!

Phoenix Books Co-owner Mike Santos Hosts Gray Basnight Introducing His New Political Thriller, "Flight of the Fox"

Mike Santos, co-owner of Phoenix Books, is pleased to host an author event with Gray Basnight and his political thriller, Flight of the Fox. The event will take place on September 13 at 7 p.m. at the Burlington bookstore on Bank St.

Mike Santos and Gray Basnight had studied acting in graduate school together many decades ago and subsequently pursued separate life paths only to reconnect by happenstance this year. Mike now owned a book store and Gray had been writing novels. Flight of the Fox was just released this July.

In Flight of the Fox an innocent math professor tries to decode a mystery file that lands in his in-box while a team of hitmen chase him from the Catskills to NYC and down the East Coast. Their goal is to suppress dark government crimes from decades past. His goal is for the truth to be told.

The action switches between the J. Edgar Hoover era and Professor Sam Teagarden's decoding of the mystery file in 2019, against the 50th Anniversary of the Woodstock Festival.

As the professor runs for his life, armed only with his wits and intellect, he worries whether the truth will be told, and if he'll be seen as a hero, whistle blower, or a pariah. Or worse, will he end up dead?

Joseph Finder, New York Times bestselling author of The Switch says, "Flight of the Fox is an explosively paranoid thriller that pays homage to classics of the genre. Basnight delivers non-stop action and an everyman hero to root for."

Proceeds from $3 ticket sales go to the Vermont Foodbank. Each ticket comes with a coupon for $5 off a copy of Flight of the Fox. Coupons expire at closing the evening of the event.

Butterfly Magic

by Judith Irven

It is pure magic to watch a group of delicate butterflies fluttering around the garden. At first glance they seem to move entirely at random. But watch quietly for a few minutes and you will see they have an unmistakable sense of direction as they navigate from flower to flower in search of nectar.

And, for me, 2018 has been a very special year for butterflies. In addition to many different kinds making delightful cameo appearances in my garden, there were also three very special butterfly 'happenings' which I truly cherish.

Clouds of blue

One beautiful morning, back in early May, I was strolling across the open area on Hogback Mountain near our house where the wild blueberries grow, soaking up the sights and smells of spring.

Then suddenly I saw clouds of miniature blue butterflies. I was completely mesmerized as I watched these tiny creatures flitting back and forth, presumably gathering food and maybe seeking a mate.

I came home and indeed I found these same blue butterflies, each measuring barely an inch long, were also greeting the spring in my garden.

I have seen these butterflies in previous years, but usually just two or three. After a little checking I concluded they were most likely Spring Azure Butterflies (Celastrina ladon).

But, whatever their name, I cannot forget the sight of those dancing blue clouds.

A butterfly ballet

A few weeks later it was time for the Tiger Swallowtails (Papilio glaucus) to arrive. These are large yellow butterflies with easily recognized black stripes that are indeed reminiscent of a tiger's stripes.

For many years now the Tiger Swallowtails have predictably arrived in large numbers in early June. They would stay about four weeks to feast on the various lilacs that grow in my garden—first the common lilacs, then the Korean Lilacs and finally the Late Lilacs. And then, once the lilacs were finished flowering, in past years the butterflies quickly disappeared.

But 2018 was special. The Tiger Swallowtails arrived on cue to enjoy the lilacs, but then they stayed with us all summer long.

It is a wonderful sight to see them flying around the summer garden, and then stopping at flowers like Echinacea, Helenium, Heliopsis and Shasta Daisies to enjoy the nectar.

And many times I would watch a pair of butterflies spiral higher and higher, dancing together in a graceful duet. Was this a mating dance?

Tiger Swallowtails will only lay their eggs on the leaves of a select number of trees, including black cherry, ash and birch. And fortuitously many of these trees grow in the surrounding forest, thus making our garden a place where they can indeed, complete their life cycle.

Those intrepid travelers

The iconic American Monarch butterflies (Danaus plexipus), with their orange wings, black veining and a distinctive black and white checkered pattern around the margins, are instantly recognizable by gardeners and non-gardeners alike.

A decade ago every year in late summer we would see dozens of Monarch butterflies in our garden. Seeking the nectar, adult butterflies flocked to the Shasta Daisies, Blazing Star, Echinacea, Rudbeckia, Asters, and—always a huge favorite among all the butterflies—the ornamental Oregano. They would also spend time in the meadow across the road among the wild Asters and Goldenrod.

Also, since the Monarch caterpillars can ONLY eat plants in the milkweed genus (Asclepias), when it comes time to lay their eggs the adults always seek out the milkweed plants. Fortunately that same meadow has a good supply of milkweed.

But in the past decade we have all witnessed an enormous decline in the number of Monarchs; recently in any one season I probably only saw two or three of these beautiful butterflies in our garden, typically arriving around the middle of August! In fact studies show that, all across the country, the number of Monarchs has declined precipitously—with an estimated loss of about 90% of the overall Monarch population over the last decade.

But this year I am delighted to report that we have seen quite an increase in the number of Monarchs in our garden. And, what is especially interesting, while they first arrived in mid-June, we are still watching the Monarchs in August.

To understand what has been happening in the world of the Monarch butterflies it helps to know a little about their amazing life cycle.

There are actually several populations of American Monarchs, with the two major populations, the Eastern Monarchs and the Western Monarchs, both famous for their distributed breeding patterns and for their legendary long distance migrations. In the summertime Eastern Monarchs can be found all the way from Mexico to southern Canada and from the Rocky Mountains to the Eastern seaboard. And, all across this huge land area, as many as four generations of butterflies are born in a single season.

Then, starting in September and October, all Eastern Monarchs, (with the exception of a few that use the Atlantic seaboard) undertake a single prodigious migration to reach their over-wintering destination, the Monarch Butterfly Biosphere Reserve, in Southern Mexico.

During this migration, these tiny creatures fly the most astonishing distances. Those that start out in Vermont will travel almost three thousand miles to reach their winter destination in Mexico, while the population that begins its journey in the Canadian Maritime Provinces will fly nearly five thousand miles!

The following March those same butterflies set out on a northbound trip. However no individual butterfly flies all the way north. At successive stops along the way the females seek out milkweed plants where they lay their eggs. Then the resulting caterpillars produce the next generation of butterflies that continues its journey northwards. Typically, over the course of the entire summer, four generations will be raised. The generation reaching Vermont will be either the great-grandchildren or even the great-great-grandchildren of the butterflies that overwintered in Mexico. But, we need to understand that, in order to complete this incredible life cycle, Monarchs absolutely require milkweed (the only plant that their caterpillars can eat) at EACH breeding area on their journey north.

However, due to large-scale farming practices in the Midwest, milkweed is inadvertently being eradicated. Many farmers spray their fields with the herbicide Round-up in the springtime and then plant 'Round-up ready' seed. But all too often the herbicide spray goes beyond the fields onto the surrounding rough ground, killing plants like milkweed (which farmers consider a weedy 'nuisance plant' that is toxic to livestock) growing there.

The good news is that, across the country, milkweeds are actually starting to make a come-back. In 2016, to help the beleaguered butterflies, the USDA started offering incentives for farmers and ranchers to plant milkweed and other pollinator friendly plants. And since milkweeds can also be grown in gardens, many gardeners and schools have also been experimenting with planting them.

And there is also a fascinating initiative underway, both in Quebec and in the Vermont's Northeast Kingdom, to grow milkweed commercially and harvest the floss (downy material that surrounds the milkweed seeds) to use as an insulating material. Imagine your next winter jacket might actually be helping the Monarch butterflies.

Welcoming butterflies to your garden

Some of the best garden plants to attract butterflies are those in the huge daisy family (Compositae) including Echinacea, Heliopsis, Shasta Daisies, and Black Eyed Susans, all of which have easily available nectar.

And then, for those butterfly species you do see, you want to encourage them to stay around and lay eggs for the next generation. Do a little research to find out which plants their caterpillars need. Thus for the Monarchs it always helps to plant any type of milkweed, including the cheery orange variety, appropriately called Butterfly Weed!
