PASTURE BARS

He found the Jerseys waiting patiently,
Grouped near the bars beneath the pasture hill,
Calm-eyed, serene, a part of patient days
And seasons going by with footsteps still.

With grave regard they watched the bar's release
Bring freedom and the fresh, sweet wayside grass
And homeward turned sedately, while he paused
Waiting the pleasure of an idling lass.

And then delayed beside the open bars,
Beyond which he could see the dark hills' blue
Changing to gold and rose, for one last need
To let the sunset through!

Reenactor plays the flute in a parade at the Vermont History Expo, this year on June 16–17 in Tunbridge, VT.

“Vermont in the Civil War” Theme of Vermont History Expo!

The Vermont History Expo is down-home fun whether you are 8 or 88! Musicians, authors, genealogists, crafters and other talented professionals offer Expo workshops, parades, Civil War re-enactments, performances and demonstrations.

“Vermont in the Civil War” is the theme of this year’s Vermont History Expo on June 16th and 17th at the Tunbridge Fairgrounds, in Tunbridge, VT.

Visitors will learn how Vermonters lived through the Civil War period and how our state was forever changed during and after the war.

In honor of the Civil War theme, more living historians will be at the History Expo than ever before. In addition to Vermont infantry and cavalry soldiers, there will be a contingent portraying a Confederate infantry regiment plus medical personnel, musicians, and staff officers.

Others will portray civilian men, women and children of the period. At the sutler’s tent, visitors will play the role of soldiers using a signed note of credit against the next month’s pay to buy supplies and extra goods.

Buildings, tents, stalls and open spaces will be filled with history that comes alive (both Civil War and other history). Local historical societies will present exhibits about their towns. Living historians will stage scenes of the time. Crafters host hands-on and collective experiences for visitors. Authors and speakers present stories of Vermont’s past. And some wonderful musicians will entertain.

Heritage breed animals will be on display, and the Morgan Horse folks will present our noble state animal in the context of the Civil War.

If you are looking to make discoveries about your ancestors, genealogists will be on hand to help you.

There will be plenty of great food and good old-time fun with children’s games from the past.

On the Saturday evening of the History Expo, a town supper will be served by local Tunbridge school students.

After dinner, folks will stroll back down to the fairgrounds to join soldiers and musicians around the campfire and sing songs that would have been heard on a typical battlefield.

Tunbridge Fairgrounds is on Rt. 110 in Tunbridge, VT. For more information call (802) 479-8500 or visit www.vermonthistory.org/expo.

Enjoy Early Summer Vermont Festivities

Late spring in Vermont is a feast for the senses: lilac bushes undulate in the breeze; crisp fiddleheads and tangy, sweet rhubarb come into season; cool mornings shift to short sleeve weather by midday and sunsets stretch into the late-evening. Amidst all this renewal, visitors are already out exploring the robust line-up of events, open doors and unhurried roads. Mark your calendar, the VermontVacation.com Travel Planner lists these events and many more.

Strolling of the Heifers Parade and Green Expo

June 1-3 • Brattleboro, VT

Watch scores of lovable heifer calves led by future farmers, followed by many other farm animals, bands, tractors, floats, clowns and much more in this world-famous spoof on "The Running of the Bulls." When it's over, follow the crowd to the all-day 11-acre Live Green Expo for food, music, dance, exhibits and fun for the entire family. strollingoftheheifers.com.

Burlington Discover Jazz Festival

June 1-10 • Burlington, VT

For more than a quarter of a century, the Queen City has celebrated live music during the annual Discover Jazz Festival. Music resonates from every corner of Burlington—from the region's premier performing arts facility, the Flynn Center, to the Church Street Marketplace, to Waterfront and City Hall Parks, to neighborhood restaurants. This 10-day event is a chance for the community to revel in jazz and meet the world-renowned artists. www.discoverjazz.com.

President Calvin Coolidge State Historic Site Re-Opening Celebration

June 9 • Plymouth Notch, VT

The President Calvin Coolidge State Historic Site in rural Plymouth Notch is America's best-preserved presidential site. Calvin Coolidge, born there in 1872, also became president onsite in a dramatic early morning inauguration on August 3, 1923, after President Harding's death. An exhibit, "More than Two Words: The Life and Legacy of Calvin Coolidge," opens with a variety of activities planned to celebrate this new historical feature. historicsites.vermont.gov.

Vermont Days

June 9-10 • Statewide

Enjoy free admission at Vermont State Park day areas, state-owned historic sites and the Vermont History Museum. Hiking, biking, boating, fishing, picnicking – or just relaxing with a good book! Saturday is also free fishing day—the one day of the year when residents and non-residents may fish without a license. Vermont Days feature activities and events at state parks and historic sites, including a fishing clinic at Branbury State Park, the Green Mountain Brass Band at Waterbury Center State Park and a Lorax Storywalk at the following state parks: Silver Lake, Mt. Philo, Button Bay, Knight Point and Elmore. www.vermontdays.com.

33rd Annual Quechee Hot Air Balloon, Craft & Music Festival

June 15-17 • Quechee, VT

The skies over Quechee and the Upper Valley of Vermont and New Hampshire will be filled with vibrantly colored hot air balloons ushering in the annual Quechee Hot Air Balloon, Craft & Music Festival. The longest continuously running hot air balloon festival in New England, the Quechee Hot Air Balloon Festival is one of Yankee Magazine's Top 20 Events of summer. www.quecheeballoonfestival.com.

Vermont History Expo

June 16-17 • Tunbridge, VT

Designated by the Vermont Chamber as a Top 10 Ten Summer Event, the Vermont History Expo invites you to walk back in time at this country fair where more than 150 local historical societies, museums, and heritage organizations unite. Some exhibits commemorate the 150th anniversary of the Civil War and Vermont's significant role in that war. In addition to learning opportunities, enjoy crafters, musicians and children's games. www.vermonthistory.org/expo.

Rockfire, An Elemental Experience

June 23 • Websterville, VT

This annual summer solstice event at Millstone Hill honors the immigrant communities that lived and worked at the granite quarries for more than a century, and embraces the recreation and beauty that the space offers today. Enjoy more than 900 luminaries and 40 bonfires burning throughout the quarry while visitors walk the biking trails to see live performances. www.rockfirevt.com.

Native American Heritage Festival

June 23-24 • Vergennes, VT

Discover the vibrant Native culture of the Champlain Valley Region as members of the Elnu and Missisquoi Abenaki tribes, the Nulhegan Band of the Coosuk and Koasek Traditional Band of the Koas Abenaki Nation gather at Lake Champlain Maritime Museum for the annual celebration of the region's Native American Heritage. Tribal members dressed in traditional garments will demonstrate singing, drumming, basket making, bead decoration, food preparation and other life skills. Sign up in advance for "Paddle to Prehistory" and travel by canoe to the site of an ancient Native American village with archaeologist Joanne Dennis.

Roots on the River Music Festival

The Thirteenth Annual Roots on the River Music Festival features old favorites and new voices scheduled to take the stage during Southern Vermont's premiere summer music event coming June 7-10 to Bellows Falls, VT

Headliner Fred Eaglesmith and his band will be joined by Hayes Carll, Mary Gauthier, and Red Molly all making return appearances. Over the weekend, more than 20 sets will be offered!

Thursday night's opening show will feature new and regional artists at 33 Bridge Street, an historic mill building with a large dance floor, located on the Connecticut River.

On Friday, the village of Bellows Falls hosts six free open-air concerts around the Square and at the popular Bellows Falls Farmers' Market.

The Friday evening stage at the Big Tent festival site at Everyday Inn in Rockingham features Brock Zeman, Danielle Miraglia, and Blackie and the Rodeo Kings. Former Roger Marin sideman Phil Bosley has his own set. Local talent includes Hot Mustard and Michael Hertz.

Saturday's artists includes Steel Wheels, a group that offers up a mix of blues and bluegrass, old-time sing-a-longs, and body-moving fiddling, and Hot Mustard. The bluegrass Barnstar! will entertain featuring Mark Erelli, Zack Hickman, Charlie Rose, Jake Armerding, and his father Taylor Armerding. And festival favorite trio Red Molly will perform.

Veteran performer Hayes Carll has said this is one of his favorite festivals. Eaglesmith will follow Carll in the Saturday lineup offering up his unique mix of a few stories, some songs, a few more stories and quite a few more songs.

The festival winds down on Sunday with the all-acoustic concert at the historic Rockingham Meeting House. Joining Eaglesmith at this venue will be Mary Gauthier.

sion to events. They are treated to an opening reception on Thursday, receive a "goody bag" filled with gifts, and free admission to the parting event.

The concert is always family and pet friendly, and smoke-free, just bring along a blanket or lawn chair. A popular Saturday feature is a Kids' Tent with organized activities, games, and healthy refreshments provided throughout the day. Bring a lawn-chair or blanket for Every Day Inn concerts if you have not purchased a deluxe ticket. There is free parking at all venues, and lots of great food!

Sorting Myself Out

by Sally O’Kane McClintock

Twelve packed boxes stand in the way of my reaching a life “all sorted out.” Stored neatly in the living room and covered with a decorative cloth, the boxes wait for me to summon the courage for a final sorting. Others may consult practical books on sorting their possessions, but a playwright and a poet are my guides. But because of them, I am stuck in the middle, between postponing and exploring.

Whenever I think of sorting my things, I remember Davies’ recurring plaint in The Caretaker, “Got to go to Sidcup, get myself sorted out.”

In this play by Harold Pinter, Davies is a tramp who calls himself by two names. When questioned, he insists there are papers in Sidcup that will sort this all out, “They tell you who I am.” But he never makes that trip for the documents, blaming lack of shoes or bad weather—always something. I can still hear Davies repeating, “Got to go to Sidcup, get myself sorted out,” even though I saw the play 50 years ago.

Unlike Davies, I have papers here in my desk that explain my three last names. Birth certificate, marriage licenses, and divorce decree tell who I am. But I am like Davies in postponing my own sorting. While most of my stored items are

“I may also uncover my own self, as I remember what was once—or still may be—important to my life.”

organized in cabinets, basement, and the garage, there are still those twelve unsorted boxes in the living room.

Some bear strange labels: “By the file cabinet,” “On the card table.” Cancer had come to me. Chemo was in my life. My husband had died the year before and I lived alone. In a hurry between treatments, my children were moving me to live near them. “Label those boxes when you pack them,” I said as I left, “so I know what’s in them when they get there.” There was no time for me to finish the packing.

Nine years later, a cancer survivor, I look at the labeled boxes and wonder what was by the file cabinet, what was on the card table. I could open the boxes and look. But I hesitate, although there might be some precious things stored in them. Somewhere there’s a jade necklace my father gave me when I was a teenager, bought from a drunken sailor, he said, on a San Francisco wharf. Or I might find my wooden pin of the old woman who lived in a shoe. I had the pin from childhood, the size of a button, with a tiny scene of the woman and the shoe and the children. In which box might it be?

Still I hesitate to open the boxes and finish the sorting. I know that sorting is more than uncovering and rearranging the items stored. I may also uncover my own self, as I remember what was once—or may still be—important to my life. And perhaps consider rearrangement.

I wish I were bold enough to be guided by the poetry of T.S. Eliot, as he writes about exploring in Little Gidding from Four Quartets:

We shall not cease from exploration
And the end of all our exploring
Will be to arrive where we started
And know the place for the first time.

If I explore those final twelve boxes, perhaps I will find my jade necklace or my little pin. But to arrive where I started? What would that mean? And what would it be like to know the place for the first time? Like Davies, I am fearful.

And thus I balance between postponing and exploring, caught between the play and the poem. The jade will have to wait. And the old woman in her shoe. Why chance a life all sorted out for a possible glimpse of eternity—or of nothing?

Wild Strawberries

by Bob Krum

My first experience with wild strawberries came when my Dad, my brother, Jim, and I were on a trout-fishing trip. We had driven to a small stream, pitched our tent, and started a five-day vacation. After I had fished for two days from daylight to dark, I needed a break, so during midday I took a walk across a sand barren.

The area lacked trees and had few shrubs or grasses but it did have extensive patches of wild strawberries. While the strawberries were not much bigger than peas, they were plentiful and I managed to pick two or three cups.

The next morning, I proudly displayed the strawberries. Dad and Jim didn't say too much; they just poured them on their cold cereal, added a little sugar, poured on some milk, and started gobbling. The following morning we had strawberries sprinkled over our pancakes. Those strawberries made that fishing trip a lot more enjoyable. They added some variety to an otherwise monotonous menu of beans and hot dogs.

Wild strawberries still make welcome additions to a camper's menu. Strawberries are great for quick snacks while you're hiking, fishing, or strolling around camp. About the only preparation needed is to wash them because they do tend to pick up grit.

Although there are many places you can go to pick commercially raised strawberries, the wild ones seem so much tastier. Admittedly, wild strawberries are much smaller than tame varieties, but the wild berry packs a lot of flavor into that small package.

While strawberries are common throughout New England, they don't prosper in deep shade. Forest openings, rights-of-way, abandoned fields, timber cuts, and burns offer strawberries a perfect place to grow.

Strawberries are herbaceous (not woody) biennials that perpetuate the species by seeds and runners (stolons). The compound leaf is composed of three deeply serrated (toothed) leaflets.

Strawberries blossom in May and ripen in late June through mid-July. Each berry is about twice as large as a pea.

It's difficult to pick more than a quart of wild strawberries in a reasonable time, so most of its uses are limited to garnishes or embellishments. One of my favorite recipes consists of a half cup of wild strawberries mixed into pancake batter. Fry the pancakes and embellish them with a few especially red-ripe berries. Then drench the pancakes with a syrup made by simmering strawberries, water, and brown sugar. Who says camp meals have to be boring?

You can mix strawberries with other berries to get a little more mileage out of them. As the strawberries are tapering off, the blueberries, black and red raspberries, junberries, and black currants are just starting. You can combine these berries and make a good berry stew. Combining berries to make cobblers, upside-down cakes, syrups, and jellies makes good sense and better taste!

You can freeze strawberries easily. Wash and stem them, drain well. Place them in plastic lock-type bags and freeze. Try putting premeasured amounts (say, one to two cups) into each bag so you won't have to bother measuring the thawed berries when you need them for a recipe.

The following recipes are great for wild strawberries but you can substitute regular berries if that's what you have.

STRAWBERRY SYRUP

This is a handy recipe for the camp cook. It goes well with pancakes. Mash ½ to 1 cup of wild strawberries in a saucepan. Add ½ cup of water and ¼ cup brown sugar. Bring to a boil, then simmer for 15 minutes.

STRAWBERRY PANCAKES

Again, this is a simple camp recipe. Use a pancake mix that only requires that you add water. I usually make enough pancake batter for three people to eat three saucer-sized pancakes, which is a cup plus of mix. When you have mixed up the pancake batter, add approximately ¼ cup of wild strawberries that have been washed and the caps removed. Cook the pancakes as usual—you might need just a little more cooking oil than normal to keep the pancakes from sticking. Serve with the above strawberry syrup and you'll have pancakes better than any you could make or buy back home.

FRUIT BATTER PUDDING

2 cups fresh wild strawberries	1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup sugar	2 cups flour
½ cup shortening	2½ tsp. baking powder
1 cup sugar	¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg, well-beaten	1 cup milk

Preheat oven to 350°. Mix berries with ½ cup sugar and put in well-greased square pan. Prepare batter: cream shortening well, and add 1 cup sugar. Add egg and vanilla. Beat until well blended. Sift dry ingredients together. Alternately add dry ingredients and milk to the batter. Pour batter over berry mixture. Bake about 45 minutes. This recipe can be used with blueberries, cranberries, red and black raspberries, and blackberries as well.

—Emily Krumm, Eaton Rapids, Michigan

WILD STRAWBERRY JAM (USING HONEY)

4 cups strawberry pulp (approx. 2 quarts)	1 package pectin
6½ cups honey	¼ teaspoon margarine, butter, or cooking oil
¼ cup lemon juice

Wash, stem, and crush strawberries thoroughly until reduced to pulp. Measure honey in bowl and set aside. Measure fruit pulp into 6 or 8-quart saucepan or kettle. If a little short of fruit, add water. Add lemon juice. Add the package of pectin to fruit in kettle. Stir thoroughly to dissolve, scraping sides of pan to make sure all the pectin dissolves. (This takes a few minutes.) Place mixture over high heat. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly to prevent scorching. Add the pre-measured honey. Mix well. Bring to full rolling boil (a boil that can't be stirred down). Add the ¼ teaspoon of margarine, butter, or cooking oil and continue stirring. Boil hard until the temperature reaches 221° on a candy or deep-fat thermometer. Remove mixture from heat. Skim foam and pour into glasses. Securely tighten two-piece metal lids and submerge glasses in boiling-water bath for 5 minutes. Yield: ten 8-ounce jars

CRUNCHY FRUIT MUFFINS

1½ cups whole-wheat flour	2 eggs, beaten
2½ tsp. baking powder	¼ cup lemon or plain yogurt
½ cup wheat germ or rolled oats	¼ cup honey
½ cup chopped nuts or sunflower seeds (optional)	1 cup fresh strawberries

Preheat oven to 400°. In large bowl combine flour, baking powder, oats or wheat germ, nuts or seeds. In small bowl combine eggs, yogurt, and honey. Mix lightly. Add wild strawberries or other berries or chopped fruit. Combine wet and dry ingredients and mix until just moistened. Batter may be lumpy. Grease 12 muffin cups, fill two-thirds full. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes until golden. Note: If using juicy berries such as strawberries, blackberries, or raspberries, add last and mix in lightly before adding batter to muffin tins. Can be made with any berries or chopped fruit.

by Burr Morse

I've had plenty of chance to walk the farm lately what with sugaring's early tapping, mid-season's repairing, and the pulling of spouts at the end. During the first two periods, snow conceals all natural curiosities and man-made detritus but the last period, the pulling of spouts, provides a peek at the property "au naturel." In fact, I'm a slow worker at this juncture because I stop and gaze at everything; there's generations of "relics" out there and it's wicked interesting! I've stumbled across the remains of several ancient sugarhouses, dumps dating back to Civil War times, and car parts from the Al Capone era. There's one category of that man-made stuff that's not only interesting but touches a bit on my tender psyche—stuff left over from my brothers' projects.

Out in back of the house where we all grew up is the remains of an old radio antenna tower. My older brothers, Elliott and Tick, were both HAM radio operators and radio buffs in general. The tower, a combination of wood and steel, lies prostrate in the leaf mold, almost fully "melted" back to earth now but I remember it well. Those two guys were always sending metallic fingers of one fashion or another heavenward "trolling" for messages from places like China and Tasmania. I'll never forget Elliott's pink '59 Chevy with dice hanging from the mirror and a sky-high antenna clamped to the back bumper. The antenna served a device called a citizens band radio. CB radios were big and boxy compared with modern-day cell phones. The CBers called each other "old man" and used other terms like "affirmative" and "come back!" Back then folks had common sense. I wonder, was there ever an accident caused by a CBER?

On another part of our farm near a grove of maples is a boneyard for farm equipment. I was there the other day pulling spouts and pondering. It would be junk to most people but to me the two ancient Allis Chalmers corn choppers resembled Brontosaurus. Their curved discharge spouts reached up to "nibble" on young, encroaching maple and ash trees and nearby, a rusted New Holland baler with a jagged-toothed plunger looked like a Tyrannosaurus ready to pounce! My brothers have also left marks of their "mechanical" sides there. Yes, they were always tinkering on cars, motorcycles, or anything else that popped or belched, or bloodied knuckles.

I was never mechanically or technically minded. My wife says I can't even replace a battery in a clock and she's right.

I always thought it was unfair that th'old family genes got thrown in such different directions. Elliott and Tick always tried to help me but ended up walking away shaking their heads. I once ordered a Heath Kit radio through the mail. It was so handsome as it appeared in the catalogue, a low profile box, a green lighted front, and rows on rows of knobs and buttons. The description promised all imaginable kinds of music from exotic places. I remember the excitement I felt the day it arrived but the brown cardboard box opened up to reveal a left brain marathon for this right brain teenager. Just the word "schematic" scared me enough, say nothing of the thousand tiny parts! I rushed it up to brother Tick's house and he baled me out like he had done many times before. I enjoyed that radio for years afterward.

Elliott used to run a Volkswagen repair shop on one part of the farm back in the days when Volkswagens were Volkswagens. He was known as Mr. VW by a wide range of customers from white-collared Montpelier pencil-pushers to Goddard College hippies. I used to go over there to learn from Elliott but he kicked me out the day I tried to check the liquid in a battery by lighting a match. "You just found out how a hydrogen bomb works," he shouted as he pointed to the door!

Yup, they tell me that my forte is the ability to write about these things and I appreciate that. And finally, alas, at the age of sixty-four I accept my lot in life. When it comes to the technical and the mechanical, I'll just have to be content to walk the acreage and fantasize over other peoples' rifferaff—good stuff in my mind—left behind by those who can tinker.

Young Wildlife Belong in the Wild

We all enjoy watching wildlife, especially at this time of year when young animals are appearing. But, the temptation to pick up young wildlife that seem to be abandoned can do more harm than good, according to the Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department.

People often mistakenly assume that young animals they see alone are helpless, lost or in trouble and need rescuing. Taking young wildlife from the wild into a human environment is not a good idea, and is against the law. The results are often permanent separation from their mother and almost always a sad ending for the animal.

Handling wildlife also involves threats to the people involved. Diseases as well as angry mothers can pose significant dangers.

Understanding the behavior of animals in the spring and early summer can help people resist the urge to assist wildlife in ways that may do more harm than good.

- Deer and moose nurse their young at different times during the day, and their young are often left alone for long periods of time. These animals are not lost. Their mother knows where they are and will return.
- Young birds on the ground may have left their nest, but their parents will still feed them.
- Young animals such as fox and raccoon will often follow their parents. The family of a "wandering" animal searching for food is usually nearby but just out of sight to a person happening upon it.

• Animals that act sick can carry rabies, parasites or other harmful diseases. Do not handle them. Healthy-looking raccoons, foxes, skunks, and bats also may also be carriers of the deadly rabies virus even though they do not show symptoms.

• Obey signs that restrict access to wildlife nesting areas, including hiking trails. Many wildlife species will not feed or care for their young when people are close.

• Keep domestic pets indoors, leashed or fenced in. Dogs and cats kill many baby animals each year.

• Avoid removing trees, shrubs and dead snags that contain bird and other nests during the spring and summer.

For information about rabies and nuisance wildlife, call the Vermont Rabies Hotline at 1-800-472-2437. If bitten or in direct contact with a raccoon, fox, skunk, or bat, or a domestic animal that has been in contact with one of these species, call the Vermont Department of Health at 1-800-640-4374.

For the safety of all wildlife taking a wild animal into captivity is illegal. If you find an orphaned animal, however, you can contact the nearest rehabilitator specializing in the species you've found. Look under "Wildlife Programs" on Vermont Fish & Wildlife's website at www.vtfishandwildlife.com to learn about Vermont's wildlife rehabilitates.

Contact the Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department at (802) 241-3700 if you any questions.

THE RAIN

I hear leaves drinking Rain;
 I hear rich leaves on top
 Giving the poor beneath
 Drop after drop;
 'Tis a sweet noise to hear
 These green leaves drinking near.
 And when the Sun comes out,
 After this Rain shall stop,
 A wondrous Light will fill
 Each dark, round drop;
 I hope the Sun shines bright;
 'Twill be a lovely sight.

Cliff Tops and Overlooks Closed to Protect Nesting Peregrines

Hiking Vermont's hillsides is a great way to enjoy a warm spring day, but the Vermont Fish and Wildlife Department recommends you check to see if the area you're planning to hike or climb is open. Eleven cliff areas are currently closed to protect nesting peregrine falcons.

"Peregrine nesting activity has been observed at approximately 40 sites this spring," said John Buck, Vermont Fish and Wildlife Department biologist. "But, we only closed the cliffs where there's a chance of people disturbing the nesting birds."

Cliff areas or portions of cliff areas currently closed include:

Barnet Roadcut, Barnet—Rt. 5 pullout is closed.

Bolton Notch, Bolton—access to the Upper Upper West cliff is closed.

Bolton Quarry, Bolton—portions of the cliff are closed to climbing.

Deer Leap, Bristol—the cliff top is closed.

Fairlee Palisades, Fairlee—the cliff top is closed.

Marshfield Mt., Marshfield—portions of the cliff are closed to climbing.

Nichols Ledge, Woodbury—the cliff top is closed.

Rattlesnake Point, Salisbury—the southern lookout is closed.

Smuggler's Notch, Cambridge—access to climbing near Elephant Head is closed.

Snake Mt., Addison—the top of the cliff area south of pond and foundation is closed.

Wheeler Mt., Barton—portions of the cliff are closed to climbing and hiking.

"The areas closed include the portions of the cliffs where the birds are nesting and the trails leading to the cliff tops or overlooks," said Buck. "In many cases the lower portions of the trails are still open."

The Vermont Fish and Wildlife Department partners with Audubon Vermont to monitor the sites throughout the nesting season. These sites will remain closed until August 1, but if a falcon pair doesn't nest or if the nest is not successful, the sites will be reopened sooner.

According to Margaret Fowle of Audubon Vermont, at least 27 peregrine falcon pairs nested in Vermont during the 2011 season. Eighteen pairs were successful, producing at least 38 young falcons.

"We appreciate the public's support in respecting the cliff closures," said Buck. "It's helping to ensure that peregrines remain part of Vermont's landscape."

Updated information on cliff closures is listed at www.vtfishandwildlife.com or you may call (802) 241-3700.

You can report peregrine sightings by calling Vermont Fish and Wildlife or e-mailing fwinformation@state.vt.us.

Scientific wildlife management has enabled peregrine falcons like this one to make a dramatic comeback since they disappeared from the eastern U.S. in the 1960s. Eighteen pairs successfully raised at least 38 young last year in Vermont.

Moveable Feasts

A few days ago, I received a letter from Jeffery Goss, a correspondent of mine who lives in Springfield, Missouri.

"This spring has rattled everything I thought I knew about phenological time measurements," wrote Jeffery. "For example, in March, zeitgebers came three to four weeks early and not even in the right order. Maybe it's climate change."

Jeffery's experience was similar to mine. I have spent years trying to define the seasons, dividing them up, connecting them to one another, looking for signs and footprints. I have found that location usually dictates the progress of the year, as measured by the blooming of plants, and that usually certain dates on the Gregorian calendar can serve as markers for the seasons. In February, I have enjoyed taking a day or two and driving south into spring, discovering the gradual unravelling of winter through the Border States, finally arriving at May or early June by the time I reach the Gulf.

Warmer than the pair of record Marches in 1945 and 1946, this past March pushed many northern states into the patterns I have charted for Columbia, South Carolina. If another exceptional March occurs this coming year, the plot will thicken, and if similar early springs occur within the decade to come, then the paradigm will have definitely shifted.

If seasonal markers become moveable feasts, then clusters of phenological events become more significant for defining the progress of the year. In a shifting climate scenario, the seasonal clusters become floating, almost existential, calendars, replacing an older fixed system tied to more stable weather cycles of the past century in which events took place more consistently and reflected geographical as well as temporal tiers.

Such an existential system might loose events from both geographical preconceptions and ties to the traditional months, bringing focus on events themselves and their relationship to one another.

The result would be to define time more by what occurs instead of what has always occurred or what is expected to occur. Freed from expectations of place and dates, the local observer would hover within the spin of this new phase of Earth's history, lightly riding its waves, fully aware, without expectations.

Fragrance in the Garden

by Dr. Leonard Perry

Extension Professor, University of Vermont

How do you describe scents or fragrance in flowers? There are probably as many ways as there are people, scent being very subjective. Scent varies with personal likes and dislikes. Scientists have devised various means to categorize scents, but one scheme is most common.

It was in the Victorian times at the end of the 19th century that fragrance in the garden became really popular for just that, not for any functional use. Prior to that time, fragrance was used medicinally and to mask unpleasant odors. It was also at this time (1893) that scents were first categorized by Count von Marilaun into six groups.

Since then, these have been expanded to ten scent groups, all of which are used for flowers. These groups are based on common essential oils. It is the volatile compounds from these oils that our noses register as "scents."

Violets and roses

The aromatic group has some of the most pleasantly scented flowers with scents of vanilla, balsam, almond, and cloves such as in some primroses, peonies, stocks, and pinks. The violet group and smell is, of course, present in violets. Smelling of damp woodland moss, it attracts no insects as the flowers are self-pollinating.

The rose group is pleasant and found in roses in addition to some peonies and scented geraniums. The lemon group is more often found in leaves but also in some water lilies and evening primroses. The fruit-scented group includes many roses and some minor bulbs.

Leaf scents fall into four main groups including the turpentine group (rosemary), the camphor and eucalyptus group (sage, catmint, scented geraniums), the mint group, and the sulphur group (mustard, onions, garlic). Of course, other leaf scents can be placed into the ten flower groups such as some scented geraniums in the lemon and rose groups.

Unlike trees and shrubs, whose bark and roots generally fall into aromatic or turpentine groups, most herbaceous perennials with scented roots fall into one of the flower groups, such as the rose scent of some stonecrop (Sedum).

Not all scents are for you

The indole group has flowers smelling like and resembling decayed meat or carrion, such as the skunk cabbage (Lysichiton) wake-robin (Trillium erectum), and attracts dung flies for pollination. The aminoid group also smells unpleasant to attract flies, smelling of decayed fish or ammonia, and includes many umbel flowers such as giant fennel. The heavy group smells similar to the last, only sweeter, and includes some of the oldest known fragrant flowers such as some lilies and narcissus.

The animal-scented group is usually unpleasant and may smell of musk as in some roses, human perspiration as in valerian and ox-eye daisy, and animal fur as in crown imperial. The honey-scented group is similar to the last, only sweeter, and often more pleasant. Some examples are the butterfly-bush (Buddleia) and meadowsweet (Filipendula).

Pollinators love the scents

In most flower scent groups, insects or pollinators are the main reason for scent. The scent attracts pollinators specifically needed to pollinate a flower, and at the right time. Usually if a flower is not ready, or past the time for pollination, or has been pollinated, it won't have much fragrance. If a flower is fragrant at night, odds are it is pollinated by moths or even bats. Sweet scents attract bees and flies, while fruity or musty-smelling flowers attract flies or beetles for pollination.

Tiger lilies bloom in the summer garden.

Check your cultivars for scent

While a species of plant may have fragrance, some of its highly bred offspring may not. These cultivars may have been bred for other traits instead. Roses are a good example of a plant where you should pay attention to the fragrance of specific cultivars. Often, where there are many cultivars to choose from, as with roses, peonies, daffodils or crabapples, some will have fragrant flowers and some will not.

For your garden

If you want a fragrant garden, some of the best choices for spring are lily-of-the-valley, some primroses, and hyacinths. For annual flowers, consider sweet peas or stocks—both prefer cooler parts of the season; heliotrope, flowering tobacco, sweet alyssum (I find this fragrance best for flies), or dianthus. Fragrant summer perennials include bearded iris early in the season, tall garden phlox later on and some of the oriental lilies. For woody plants, consider roses, butterfly bush (where hardy), lilacs, crabapples, or the sweet autumn clematis at the end of the season.

Summertime Events in Castleton, VT

The Historic Higley House in Castleton will be open for guided tours and historical research on Thursdays from June 14th through October 4th from 2-4 p.m.

Erastus Higley built the Higley House, called the "Homestead" by family members, during 1810 and 1811. The Higley House is unique in that it was built and lived in by the same family for almost its entire existence. Visit this lovely historic residence as well as its collection of antique carriages and tools.

The Higley House is located at 407 Main Street, Castleton on east end of town. Higley House is owned by the Castleton Historical Society.

The Castleton Village Farmers' Market will be held on Main Street across from the Castleton Town Library from 3:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Thursdays throughout the summer. Come by for fresh produce, jams and jellies, and delightful crafts.

The 5th Annual Castleton Town Wide Yard Sale will be held Saturday, June 23rd from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. It promises to be a day of fun and a chance to find bargains, treasures, food selections and one-of-a-kind items to fit everyone's pocket book. The event is held rain or shine. All proceeds from the Yard Sale will be used for the Castleton Community Seniors programs and services.

Visit the Rutland Downtown Farmers Market on Saturdays!

The Rutland Downtown Farmers Market, the largest in the state, is open for the summer season. It is located at Depot Park (across from Walmart) on Merchants Row in historic downtown Rutland, VT. The market hours are 9 a.m. till 2 p.m. every Saturday and Tuesday from 3 p.m. till 6 p.m. The market is open rain or shine till October 27th.

June is the month for strawberries and early summer veggies. There will be plenty of hanging baskets and flower and vegetable plants.

With over 90 vendors, the market offers a bounty of locally grown produce, meats, wines, cheeses, pickles and jams. Handmade crafts, pet treats, mushrooms, sweet treats, breads and prepared ethnic foods add to your shopping experience.

Crafty Needles will be presenting beautiful knit items. Baby K Threads has clothing and accessories for babies, toddlers and mamas. Horsewise has all things horsey including homeopathic horse remedies and liniments.

There will be plenty of tempting prepared foods to eat or take home. Castleton Crackers is back. JIA Indian Restaurant is bringing Indian dishes, sandwiches, and samosas. Plymouth Cheese

Co. offers artisan cheese. Pinewood Farm has frozen grass-fed beef and whey-fed pork. Bomoseen Bread Basket is bringing their popular gluten-free baked goods.

Samosa Man is bringing his samosas including the new Vermont apple samosa, Vermont spicy potato samosa, and delicious chicken curry with coconut rice. Anna's Empanadas will be there with her tempting baked meat and veggie turnovers. La Ooh La La Bakery will have delicious French bread. Flavors of Asia offers Korean noodles, spring rolls, and Kimchee. And Thai Iced Tea will be available from Tondao.

The music lineup for June includes:

June 2—Woodchuck's Revenge

June 9—Paul Brothie

June 16—Phineas Gage Project

June 23—John and Marge Butterfield

June 30—Michael Kelley

Come wander the market, sample, ask questions of the vendors, have lunch and listen to live music.

Dogs on leashes are welcome. Debit and EBT Cards are accepted.

Market manager is Doug Patac, (802) 753-7269. Visit www.vtfarmersmarket.org.

Birding Hot Spots in Rutland County

Birding at Leffert's Pond, located in the Green Mountain National Forest in Chittenden, can be enjoyed two ways – on foot or on the water by canoe or kayak.

A 2.9 mile trail loops the pond and is fairly level; however, it is sometimes not possible to cross the stream at the far end of Wildcat Road, rendering a complete loop impossible. The trail starts at the parking area and gives you glimpses of both the pond and the surrounding woodland. We have tallied 114 species there. The best times to visit are from mid-April through early October.

Common loon and pied-billed grebe are occasionally seen on the pond. Wood duck, American Black Duck, Mallard, Ring-necked Duck, Common Merganser and Hooded Merganser are frequently seen in the spring and fall and teal and scaup are occasional visitors. Osprey and Bald Eagle, drawn by the nearby reservoir, are often observed once the ice is out in mid-April. Yellow-bellied Sapsuckers and Winter Wrens can also be heard at this time.

Great Blue Heron, Wilson's Snipe and Spotted Sandpiper are usually seen in spring and summer. Hermit Thrush and Swainson's Thrush are frequently heard along with Blue-Headed Vireo, Warbling Vireo and Red-eyed Vireo. Barred Owl and Common Raven are also often heard.

Early May and mid-September are excellent times for viewing migrating warblers. Several warblers nest here such as Yellow Warbler, Chestnut-sided Warbler, Black-throated Blue Warbler, Yellow-rumped Warbler, Black-throated Green Warbler, Blackburnian Warbler, American Redstart, Ovenbird, Northern Waterthrush, Common Yellowthroat, and Canada Warbler.

Few species are seen in winter, but Leffert's Pond is an excellent spot for cross-country skiing or snowshoeing. Resident birds sure to be seen or heard in all seasons include Common Raven, Black-capped Chickadee, Golden-crowned Kinglet, White-Breasted and Red-Breasted Nuthatches and Brown Creeper as well as both Downy and Hairy Woodpeckers.

As a bonus, moose, otter, beaver and mink can be seen around the pond.

Directions: Leffert's Pond is located southeast of Chittenden Reservoir in the town of Chittenden. From the intersection of Rtes 4 and 7 in Rutland, go north on Rte 7 for 1.8 miles and turn right on East Pittsford Rd. Continue for 6 miles (E. Pittsford Rd. becomes Chittenden Rd.) to the Dam Rd./Holden Rd. intersection. Go 1.3 miles on Dam Rd. and turn right on Wildcat Rd. At nine-tenth of a mile is the dirt road access to the Chittenden Dam/Leffert's Pond parking area. An alternative is to go past the dirt road one-tenth of a mile to a small canoe access.

GRACE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
presents the deeply moving production of
LEONARD BERNSTEIN'S MASS

Music Direction by RIP JACKSON
Stage Direction and Choreography by MARIS WOLFF and the
THE VERMONT DANCE COLLECTIVE

Leonard Bernstein's Mass is a piece that relates the drama of a Celebrant whose faith is simple and pure at first, but gradually becomes unsustainable under the weight of human misery, corruption, and the trappings of his own power.

Mass is an enormous piece. It calls for a large pit orchestra, a large chorus plus a children's choir, a Broadway-sized cast, a dance ensemble, a rock band and a troupe of music theatre soloists.

This unique and deeply moving performance will feature the Rutland Area Chorus and Children's Ensemble, The Vermont Dance Collective, Music Theatre soloists and a large orchestra.

TICKETS
for evening shows:
$20 orchestra and loge;
$15 for balcony; all seats $15 for under 17 years
for afternoon show:

A Vermont Almanack for Early Summer

by Bill Felker

One has only to sit down in the woods or fields or by the shore of the river or lake, and nearly everything of interest will come round. The change of the seasons is like the passage of strange and new countries; the zones of the earth, with all their beauties and marvels, pass one's door.

—John Burroughs

The Phases of the Black Swallowtail Moon and the Firefly Moon

While swallowtail butterflies become more common in the garden, fireflies begin to flicker in the field grass and lawns. When Late Spring is warm and wet, the fireflies will be mating at the end of May along the 40th Parallel. In drier or colder areas, the lightning bugs start later and end later. Whatever their local timetable, they signal summertime.

June 4: The Black Swallowtail Moon is full at 6:12 p.m. June 11: The moon enters its final quarter at 5:41 a.m. June 19, The Firefly Moon is new at 10:02 a.m. June 26: The moon enters its second quarter at 10:33 p.m.

The Sun's Progress

Summer solstice occurs on June 20 at 6:09 p.m. The sun holds steady at its solstice declination of 23 degrees 26 minutes (and the day's length remains virtually unchanged) between June 19 and 23.

The Planets

Venus is not visible in the evening sky this month, but it reappears as the morning star by the middle of the month. Mars, still in Leo, glows red along the western horizon after sundown. Jupiter in Taurus (not far from Venus) rises before dawn this month.

The Stars

The stars of the Early Summer night suggest activities in the months ahead: Arcturus for the end of the danger of frost; the Corona Borealis for checking livestock and pets for worms; Regulus in Leo for hunting ticks and lice; Vega in the far east for summer marketing time; Castor and Pollux, setting in the west, for weaning the April lambs; Libra along the southern horizon reminding you to cull before opening up the paddocks; Scorpius promising the Dog Days ahead and the harvest of winter wheat; and finally far in the east, the Summer Triangle rising, stars that will lie above you as autumn breeding of sheep and goats begins.

The Shooting Stars

The Lyrid Meteors fall through Lyra, overhead after midnight on the nights of June 14-15 and June 15-16.

Meteorology

In June, cool fronts pass through on or about the 2nd, 6th, 10th, 15th, 23rd and 29th. Major storms are most likely to occur on the days between June 5-8, June 13-16, and June 24-28. New moon on June 19 increases the chances for freezing temperatures at upper elevations. Full moon on June 4 could contribute to unstable meteorological conditions in conjunction with the June 2 and 7 cool fronts.

VSO Outdoor Summer Concerts—Evenings of Musical Smiles

The Vermont Symphony Orchestra promises evenings of musical smiles as it presents its popular TD Bank Summer Festival Tour in nine special outdoor locations this season with a program committed to humor. Andrew Massey, from Montgomery, Vermont, will conduct the VSO. From Friday, June 29 through Sunday, July 8, the Orchestra will perform in glorious mountain and lakeside settings across the state.

Concert-goers are encouraged to bring a picnic (food and beverage will be available for purchase at some locations) and a sense of humor for music that is joyful, witty, wacky, and fun. Selections guaranteed to tickle the funny bone feature a runaway broom, an eccentric timepiece, and an orchestral laugh track. The program includes Chadwick's "Jubilee," Kabalevsky's Galop from The Comedians, Tchaikovsky's Cossack Dance, Holst's Jupiter, Bringer of Jollity, and much more. As always, the concert concludes with the spectacular 1812 Overture, fireworks and marches.

Concert Schedule

Friday, June 29, Sugarbush Resort, Warren, VT
Saturday, June 30, Jay Peak Resort, Jay, VT
Sunday, July 1, Mountain Top Inn, Chittenden, VT
Monday, July 2, Hildene Meadowlands, Manchester, VT
Tuesday, July 3, Grafton Ponds, Grafton, VT
Wednesday, July 4, Shelburne Farms, Shelburne, VT
Thursday, July 6, Suicide Six, South Pomfret, VT
Saturday, July 7, Three Stallion Inn, Randolph, VT
Sunday, July 8, Trapp Concert Meadow, Stowe, VT

"The VSO is the only American orchestra that actually tours its entire state each summer," says executive director Alan Jordan. "All of us look forward to the tour. It's a cherished summer tradition." Concerts begin at 7:30 p.m. Gates open for picnicking between 5:00 and 5:30 p.m. depending on location. Tickets range from $31-35 for adults. At most locations tickets are free for children under age 18 with advance ticket purchase (or $11 at the gate). Ticket prices for children at Shelburne are $17 under age 12, and at Stowe are $11 for children age 5-17. Tickets purchased at the gate will be subject to a surcharge. All sites are wheelchair accessible. e title sponsor for the VSO's Summer Festival Tour.

Hartland's JazzFest A One-Day Outdoor Festival

Hartland Community Arts presents JazzFest, a live music festival for the whole community, on Saturday, June 23, from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., rain or shine. The festival will take place on Foster Meadow Field next to the Hartland Library. Admission is by donation, $5 suggested per person.

This outdoor event will feature over 40 jazz performers, including professional musicians, up-and-coming talent, young ensembles, and nationally recognized guests. Picnics, water bottles, and lawn chairs or blankets are encouraged. Food, beverages, and desserts will be available for purchase. Rain and sun shelters will be on site. JazzFest is produced by Hartland Community Arts with collaboration and support from Interplay Jazz and Arts and the Hartland Recreation Department and Ledyard National Bank.

All proceeds from this event will support a youth jazz scholarship, as well as future Hartland Community Arts programming in the arts.

Come join us, sit back, and enjoy the fabulous live jazz and festive atmosphere.

Directions: I-91 to exit 9, Route 5 north one mile to the library entrance on the left (just past the gas station). For more JazzFest information e-mail jazzfest@hartlandcommunityarts.org or visit www.hartlandcommunityarts.org.

Champlaine Region State Historic Sites Now Open

The Chimney Point, Mount Independence, and Hubbardton Battlefield State Historic Sites in the Champlaine region have opened for the 2012 season. Enjoy history where it happened. Many special events are planned.

These sites have scenic grounds for walking and picnics, and specialty museum shops with many books and other items.

The Chimney Point State Historic Site on Lake Champlain in Addison, VT has reopened to the public after two years of closure due to the Lake Champlain Bridge construction project. This location is one of the most strategic on the Lake, important to Native Americans, the early French, and early American settlement. In the historic tavern's "ballroom" is a new exhibit, "What Lies Beneath: 9,000 Years of History at Chimney Point," highlighting the archaeological findings from the 2009-2011 bridge and temporary ferry project.

See evidence of earliest Native American habitation, the 1731 French fort, Moses Bradley's 1790s redware pottery, and more. The exhibit was prepared by the University of Vermont Consulting Archeology Program and guest curator Kate Kenney, Vermont bridge project archaeological monitor.

Also new are several exhibit panels and media player exploring the history of the 1929 Lake Champlain Bridge.

Bring a picnic and take a walk over the new bridge. The site is open Wednesdays through Sundays and Monday holidays, through October 8, 9:30-5:30. Admission is $3.00 for adults and free for children under 15.

Mount Independence in Orwell, VT, a National Historic Landmark named after the Declaration of Independence, was built on Lake Champlain in 1776-77 to protect the American colonies against British invasion from the north.

This year is the 235th anniversary of the American retreat from the Mount. The museum has state of the art exhibits and Revolutionary War artifacts, including two huge logs from the Great Bridge and a cannon recovered from Lake Champlain.

Six miles of scenic walking and hiking trails wind past archaeological sites. The nationally award-winning Baldwin Trail with acclaimed interpretive signage, is suitable for outdoor wheelchairs and strollers.

The annual Soldiers Atop the Mount encampment is moving this year to September 8 & 9 to commemorate the September 1777 American attempt to retake the Mount from the British.

Mount Independence is open daily, 9:30 to 5:00, through October 8. Admission is $5.00 for adults and free for children under 15.

The Hubbardton Battlefield State Historic Site is the location of Vermont's only Revolutionary War battle. It is considered one of the best preserved battlefields in America, retaining most of its original setting.

The 235th anniversary of the July 7, 1777, battle will be honored with the annual living history weekend on July 7 & 8.

Enjoy other history and astronomy programs throughout the season. The site is open Thursdays through Sundays and Monday holidays, from 9:30 to 5:00. Admission is $2.00 for adults and free for children under 15.

For more information about events visit historic-sites.vermont.gov. Join the Vermont State Historic Sites on Facebook.

Softwood Management in Vermont: A Walk in the Woods

The Vermont Woodlands Association is inviting you to get outdoors and have a Walk in the Woods! The upcoming walk is focused on softwood management in Vermont. This event will be held on Saturday, June 9th from 9 am - 1 pm at the Downer State Forest in Sharon, VT. Tim Morton, State Lands Stewardship Forester for the Vermont Dept. of Forest, Parks and Recreation, will lead a combination walk and drive through managed conifer stands and plantations. Enjoy a moderate stroll through stands of Norway spruce, red pine, Scotch pine, white pine and European larch to discuss thinning and regeneration opportunities and conundrums, the history of the Downer plantations, and the character of the different species grown.

You'll also help search for an elusive red fir tree, the sole survivor from a failed planting in 1911, and view a patch of pine left completely unmanaged since the 1930s. Easy walk, dress accordingly for outdoors, bring your own lunch. No registration required. All are welcome.

Directions to Downer State Forest: Take exit 2 off I-89 and travel north on Rt. 132 towards Strafford. At approximately 2.0 miles, turn right onto Beaver Meadow Rd. and proceed 0.2 miles to intersection with Downer Rd. Turn left onto Downer Rd, go past Crescent Lake and proceed approximately 1.5 miles to the Camp Downer sign. The gravel road on the right is the start of the state forest highway network within Downer State Forest. Parking is available at several wide turnouts along the state forest highway.

RUTLAND. Performance: Grace Church Presents Leonard Bernstein's Mass. A setting of the Roman Catholic Mass, with additional texts by Leonard Bernstein and Stephen Schwartz. This is a piece that relates the drama of a Celebrant whose faith is simple and pure at first, but gradually becomes unsustainable under the weight of human misery. An enormous piece, it calls for a large pit orchestra, two choruses plus a children's choir, a Broadway-sized cast, a dance ensemble, marching band and a rock band. Directed by Rip Jackson with choreography and stage direction by Maris Wolff, this unique performance will feature the Rutland Area Chorus and Children's Ensemble, The Vermont Dance Collective, music theatre soloists, and a large orchestra. Tickets $20/$15. 7:30 pm. Paramount Theatre, 30 Center St. (802) 775-0903. www.paramountvt.org. Also June 30.

WARREN. The Vermont Symphony Orchestra Summer Festival Tour Concert. An evening concluding with Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture and fireworks! $31 advance, $34 at the gate; under 18 free in advance, $11 at the gate. Gates open 5:30 pm for picnicking, concert at 7:30 pm. At Sugarbush Resort. (802) 870-9293 x 25. vso.org.

WATERBURY. 37th Annual Strawberry Supper. Delicious buffet dinner at historic downtown church followed by strawberry shortcake. Full meal includes drink & dessert, or you can get "just desserts." Take-out too! $10 adults, 12 and under $6, dessert only $4. 5-7 pm. Waterbury Congregational Church, 8 N. Main St. (802) 244-6606.

SATURDAY, JUNE 30

ARLINGTON. Overnight Backpack. Hike from Kelly Stand Road to Routes 11 and 30. 16 miles over Stratton Mountain with Douglas and Spruce Shelters and Prospect Rock. Sponsored by the Brattleboro Section of the Green Mountain Club. Free, non-members welcome. Contact leader for meeting time and place: Bonnie and Rob Cramp, (802) 348-7158. www.greenmountainclub.org.

BELMONT. Chicken Barbeque. $10 adults and $5 children 11 years and under. 11:30 am on the Green. For more information call (802) 259-3445.

CRAFTSBURY. Concert: Possumhaw. Bluegrass and folk. $10 general, $5 seniors and students, kids free. 8 pm. The Music Box, 147 Creek Rd. (802) 586-7533. www.themusicboxvt.org. www.possumhaw.net.

DUMMERSTON CENTER. Annual Old-Fashioned Strawberry Supper. Ham and baked beans, potato and macaroni salads, coleslaw, homemade breads, beverages, and 10" double-tiered old-fashioned strawberry shortcakes with fresh local strawberries and real whipped cream! Adults $10, children $5. Sponsored by the Dummerston Congregational Church. 5 pm - 7 pm. Evening Star Grange Hall, 1008 East West Rd. (802) 254-9158.

EAST CHARLESTON. Paddlemaking & Poling Clinic. Handcraft your own canoe paddle on Saturday with Maine Master Guide Ray Reitze. On Sunday, spend the day with Ray on the river, learning the almost-lost art of poling—the most effective technique for moving a canoe upstream and through shallow water rapids. Fee: $50 for each day. 8:30 am - 4:30 pm. NorthWoods Stewardship Center, 154 Leadership Dr. (802) 723-6551. www.northwoodscenter.org. Also July 1.

JAY. VSO Summer Festival Tour Concert. The Vermont Symphony Orchestra presents an evening of musical smiles concluding with Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture and fireworks! Tickets $31 advance, $34 at the gate; under 18 free in advance, $11 at the gate. Gates open at 5:30 pm for picnicking, concert at 7:30 pm. At Jay Peak Resort. For info or tickets call (802) 870-9293 x 25. www.vso.org.

ORWELL. Children's Colonial Afternoon. Site interpreters host a fun colonial afternoon for children. Period games, dress up, stories, hands-on activities, and refreshments. Admission: adults $5, children under 15 free. 1-3:30 pm. Mount Independence State Historic Site on Mount Independence Rd., off Rt. 73. (802) 948-2000. historicites.vermont.gov.

WATERBURY CENTER. Hike and Draw with John Geeza. Bring light, portable drawing materials (carried easily in your pack), proper outdoor clothing, and a bag lunch for an easy hike with stops to sketch or paint. Fee: $30. 9 am - 5 pm. Green Mountain Club Visitor's Center, Rt. 100. (802) 244-7037. www.greenmountainclub.org.

To Sum Up

Well may the aging poet yearn
To sum up all he's lived to learn
In a large work classical and great.

He may do better, though, to turn
Back to his small songs sharp and straight,
Loving what he loved early, late.

Fixing a Broken Food System: University of Vermont To Host Food Systems Summit, June 24–29

Our broken food system is creating economic, environmental, health, and societal problems, many experts say. The result: the agricultural landscape in the U.S. is under threat, seriously challenging the sustainable production of food.

Emerging leaders and change makers have been invited to gather and address these pressing issues, as the University of Vermont hosts its first-ever Food Systems Summit on June 24–29, 2012. A public TED-style conference with thought leaders from around the globe discussing the regional food system approach will be held June 28 from 1-6 p.m. at the Royall Tyler Theatre, UVM, Burlington, VT.

Titled “Leading the Necessary (r)Evolution for Sustainable Food Systems,” the Summit seeks to answer the pivotal question: “How can we create regional food systems that are viable alternatives to the conventional one that exists now?”

Cultivating the next generation of food leaders and empowering the local community is at the heart of the Summit. “Change is challenging,” said John Bramley, interim president at UVM and a food systems scholar. “Through our Breakthrough Leaders Program, we hope to empower the people passionate about our food system.”

The Summit consists of the following programs:

• Breakthrough Leaders Program for Sustainable Food Systems – A two-week program with a week-long online portion starting June 18, followed by a one-week residential program from June 24-29. Participants will participate in the public conference on June 28, and meet in a small group for deep dialogue with influential leaders on June 29. To learn more visit learn.uvm.edu/foodleaders.

• The Necessary (r)Evolution for Sustainable Food Systems Conference. On June 28, the public is invited to a conference highlighting innovative ideas and initiatives for transforming the food system. Topics include food safety, regional food systems and food-related businesses. To register or learn more visit bit.ly/uvmfoodsystems. This event is free and open to the public but registration is required.

• Food Systems Programs and Courses. UVM Continuing Education is offering a number of courses in Food Systems this summer. For course list go to bit.ly/food-courses. Visit learn.uvm.edu.

In addition to the Food Systems Summit, the University of Vermont offers a Farmer Training Program; Sustainable Food Systems and Agriculture courses; and a Masters Degree in Food Systems, set to launch in Fall 2012.

The Summit is part of UVM’s Food Systems Spire of Excellence with the vision of developing solutions to pressing problems in food systems through world-class research, teaching and outreach.

The University of Vermont has a history of innovative solutions to building and maintaining sustainable food systems—and is itself situated within a state with a proven model of sustainable food systems. “The combination of our place and our people make UVM a natural for hosting the Food Systems Summit,” said Jane Knodell, provost and senior vice president at UVM. “Vermont is a test-bed for exploring alternatives to the current food system. We lead the nation in per capita direct-market sales from farms to consumers. And demand for local, sustainable, and fair trade food production continues to rise. Given this culture, it’s not surprising that the university has built an impressive community of world class scholars interested in promoting a new vision for how we grow, distribute, market, and consume food.”

To register for the University of Vermont Food Systems Summit programs, conference, or for general course information, please visit learn.uvm.edu/foodsystems.

Vermont 4-H Sheep Camp June 22–24 in New Haven, VT

A weekend of sheep care instruction and fun educational activities will held for 4-H’ers from June 22–24 at the Addison County Fair and Field Days site, Route 17, New Haven, VT.

It’s open to all 4-H’ers, ages 8 to 18, enrolled in the sheep project. Learn about sheep management, characteristics and breeds, health care and animal nutrition at the UVM Extension-sponsored event. Gain hands-on experience in handling, showing and fitting sheep for shows as well as judge classes to better understand what the judges look for when ranking a class. A quiz bowl will test their overall knowledge about sheep. Any 4-H’er who requires a disability-related accommodation to participate should let us know.

Fee: $40 per person, including any 4-H leader or parent who wishes to attend sheep camp with their 4-H’ers. The fee is due by June 6 and covers meals, workshops, materials, instruction, a camp T-shirt and all activities. Scholarships are offered through many county 4-H foundations.

For information or to enroll call Wendy Sorrell at (800) 571-0668 or e-mail wendy.sorrell@uvm.edu. You can download a registration form at www.uvm.edu/extension/youth/pdfs/events/sheepcamp2012.pdf.

Strawberry Jam

Today, at lunch, the puffy rolls,
The salad, new peas and lamb,
Weren’t such a treat to me as one
Small jar of strawberry jam!

With jam, I am a child again.
One long-ago June day,
When Mother took me to a farm
That lay “up West Hill way.”

There Mrs. Crandall, dressed in blue,
Brought out a tiny chair,
And from the attic came a doll
With tightly braided hair.

Then we unhooked the pantry door
And found a little jar,
For “maybe I was hungry, dear,”
As children always are.

She cut an end from crusty bread
And spread it from a pat
Of golden butter newly churned,
And then, right after that,

She told how thick the berries grew
Under the Summer sky,
To store up sweetness just for jam
For children such as I!

10th Annual Cedar Circle Farm Strawberry Festival

Annually on the last Sunday in June, juicy red, organically-grown strawberries are cause for celebration at Cedar Circle Farm & Education Center in East Thetford, VT. Pack up the kids and come to the farm on Sunday, June 24, from 10 am to 4 pm to enjoy this special celebration, rain or shine!

Now in its tenth year, the Strawberry Festival offers fun for the whole family with kids' activities, storytelling, live music, horse-drawn wagon rides, strawberry picking, and an organic good food concession. Easy to find, Cedar Circle Farm is located on Pavillion Road along the Connecticut River, just off of Route 5.

Strawberries share the spot light with award-winning British story teller, Simon Brooks of New London, N.H., who weaves tales to delight children of all ages at 10:30 a.m., 12, and 2 p.m. on the kids' stage.

Under the tent, Black Jack Crossing, a string band made up of musicians from southern VT and N.H., plays gypsy, folk, Irish music and rock from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. Haywire, a home-grown stomp grass band from Tunbridge, VT, plays from 12:45-3:45 p.m.

From 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. an organic good food concession offers strawberry goodies including shortcake, smoothies, jam dot cookies, ice cream with sauce, and popsicles; plus garden fresh salads, local grilled sausages, and wood-fired veggie pizzas made in NOFA-VT's portable copper-domed oven.

Throughout the day, visitors can enjoy a host of mostly free activities, such as ongoing horse-drawn wagon rides to and from the organic strawberry patch, a draft horse demonstration, children's coloring projects, face painting ($1), educational exhibits, and self-guided farm tours.

"Our harvest festivals are a way of opening up the farm to the public to share our passion for what we do, and inspire interest and support for sustainability, organic farming and great fresh food," says CCF's education coordinator and festival organizer, Cat Buxton.

Raffle tickets will be sold to raise funds for CSA Shares for limited income Vermonters, through the Farm Share Program subsidized by NOFA-VT and Cedar Circle Farm.

The Strawberry Festival is a "Green Event" with a waste recovery station, which has yielded only two bags of trash for more than 1500 visitors in previous years. Bring a plate, utensils and cup to help reduce waste.

The farmstand and coffee shop are also open. Parking is available in designated fields for $5 per car, and carpooling is encouraged. Come by bicycle or on foot and get in free!

Cedar Circle Farm is a fifty-acre certified organic farm, dedicated to "growing for a sustainable future" through the production of certified organic vegetables and berries, bedding plants, and quality flowers and herbs. The farm offers a CSA program, dinners in the field, harvest festivals, gardening workshops, cooking classes, and guided educational farm tours for schools and groups.

Cedar Circle Farm is located on Pavillion Rd. along the Connecticut River, just off of Rt. 5 in East Thetford, VT. For details and directions, visit www.CedarCircleFarm.org or call the farm at (802) 785-4737.

The 12th Snake

by Charles Sutton

Someone who has lived for awhile has probably noticed a decline in the wildlife, especially certain species of birds. Those who are gardeners and others who live close to the earth have also noticed the decline in reptiles, particularly snakes and toads.

These thoughts recall the time when my brother Fred and I were children (pre-teens) and took it as natural that our property had bats, its own owl, rabbits, snakes (garters and black) and toads in the garden. Fred also had his own menagerie in the house. This included tanks of tropical fish, white mice, horned and other lizards, snakes of all kinds, and turtles.

As a budding naturalist Fred would order some of his specimens from a mail order catalog in Arizona. As the younger brother and admirer of Fred for his hobby and interest I liked to be around when these special deliveries arrived.

One summer day a package of 12 snakes caused a small crisis in the family. We had opened the box innocently enough on the dining room table. But the snakes took off in all directions, handling the jump to the floor with ease, even after their cramped journey. Fred and I recovered 11 of the snakes, but one was missing! Being an antique house, the wide floor boards had ample cracks and openings for the wary snake to hide.

In one of those childhood booboos (when it would have been better to say nothing), we told mother about the missing snake. Mother, having been city grown, was terrified of most wildlife, especially snakes which she feared were covered with some kind of slime. For two days she refused to go through the dining room, transverse the house by going up and down the front and back stairs.

Fred was not deterred nor discouraged. After all he had written the famous herpetologist Raymond Ditmars, curator of the Bronx Zoo, about finding a snake with a forked tongue. The aging Ditmars wrote back and told Fred that all snakes have forked tongues, but warmly encouraged him to continue his work with snakes. Later Fred and his buddies used to hunt rattlesnakes in the Berkshires. This was a way, then, to prove your manhood instead of overdoing girls, drugs and alcohol.

Fred eventually got mother to hold a baby garter snake in her hand, though, as a flower gardener, she had trouble even getting used to touching angleworms.

Fred finally had to move his 'zoo' to the barn. Our parents put up with odors and sounds coming from Fred's room for some time, but one night a turtle got loose and banged its way into their bedroom in search of the watering hole it might find in their bathroom. The menagerie had outlived its welcome.

Incidentally, that missing snake, number 12, was never found.

Take Time and Smell the Roses

by Judith Irven

Some people are always grumbling because roses have thorns. I am thankful that thorns have roses.

—Alphonse Karr, 1808–1890

In June we celebrate the summer solstice, when the sun is at its highest and our days are at their longest. And, in Vermont gardens, the solstice is when our roses start to bloom.

I hear you say, “Oh, I can’t grow roses...they get too many diseases and I don’t want to spray.” You are most likely thinking about Hybrid Tea roses, those doyens of modern rose breeding that, though extremely elegant, are notoriously fussy. And most will not make it through our Vermont winters anyway!

But, cold winters notwithstanding, I do grow roses in my Green Mountain garden and, emphatically, I do not spray them.

Beach roses: salt-tolerant and cold-hardy

The roses that flourish in Vermont are informal-looking spreading shrubs that feel at right home in our country gardens.

Many of them are progeny of the rugged Rosa rugosa or beach roses. Beach roses have single flowers, either pink or white, with yellow centers. And, when crossed with other species of roses, the resulting plants have fragrant flowers in either single or double forms, and in colors ranging from a full red to a clear white.

Beach roses are tough customers, able to survive winter temperatures down to -50°F. Originating in Siberia, today they grow wild along the coastline of northeastern America, where the salt spray blows in from the ocean. This ability to tolerate salt means that you can also grow them near the road—a most valuable feature indeed.

Rugosa roses and their offspring bloom copiously in late June and early July. They are disease resistant and their flowering is conveniently timed to be just before the onslaught of the dreaded ‘Japanese beetles’ that love to munch on rose flowers.

Rosehips provide functional beauty

In the fall your bushes will sport huge and beautiful rosehips. If you are so inclined, you can harvest some and make your very own rosehip syrup, which is an excellent source of Vitamin C. This link will take you to a recipe: <http://www.jeremytaylor.eu/recipes/rosehip-syrup-recipe/>.

In England during and after WWII, when oranges were either unavailable or strictly rationed, I thrived on a daily dose of government-issued rosehip syrup and other vitamin-rich supplements.

Locating hardy roses for your garden

With so many varieties and cultivars of roses offered for sale at the garden center, it is difficult to go seeking out a specific one. But, if you examine the leaves of the different roses offered for sale, you can tell those with Rosa rugosa in their heritage: look for plants with prickly stems and wrinkled leaflets.

For many years the Ottawa Research Station developed a line cold-hardy roses named for early Canadian explorers, aptly dubbed the ‘Explorer Roses.’ Two favorites in my garden are:

Rosa ‘Charles Albanel’: a 30-inch high rose with semi-double deep pink flowers followed by huge rosehips. It grows atop a boulder wall where is surrounded by carefree daylilies and, later in the season, waving grasses;

Rosa ‘William Baffin’: the most reliable climbing rose for Vermont’s climate has cheery raspberry-colored flowers.

It is also worth looking for the German-bred ‘Pavement Series’ of hardy roses. Among this group I am especially partial to Snow Pavement, a strong grower with white flowers that are tinged with pink.

But not every rose has thorns!

Our native Smooth Rose, Rosa blanda, that grows intermittently alongside our country roads, has completely thorn-less red stems. This is in fact is how you to tell it apart among the half-dozen or so roses that grow wild in Vermont.

The Smooth Rose: lovely in summer, fall and winter

When cultivated en-masse the Smooth Rose creates a lovely hedgerow that will flourish in full sun or part shade.

It grows among a stand of birches that separate my garden from the road, and for a few glorious days in late June

its single pink flowers create the perfect backdrop for the peonies and garden roses that bloom in the garden at the same time.

The Smooth Rose is lovely in other seasons too! In the fall I add its red rose hips to the bouquets of asters I like to bring indoors—no prickles to contend with!!

And at the winter solstice in late December, the low sun shines on its stems and hips, red against the snow.

Small treats for a big moose

Proof of the thorn-less nature of our rose hedge came some years back now. One morning in early June we were quite surprised to see out of the kitchen window a huge bull moose ever so gently stripping each rose stem and eating the leaves and buds. He stayed over an hour, only moving on when he had laid every stem bare—there were neither rose flowers nor hips that year!!

Nurturing nature

When we started making our Vermont garden back in 1994 my husband Dick spied a few small red-stemmed rose shrubs volunteering in the rough hedgerow behind the garden. Over the years he gently encouraged them by cutting out any obvious competing woody plants, while I let in more light by pruning the lower branches off the birches.

Now we are blessed with a handsome hedge of native Smooth Roses, about 10 feet deep and fifty feet long. They meander among the birch trees and grow out into the sunny space beyond.

However the Smooth Rose is not for the flowerbeds. Its ability to deal with rough grass tells us that in a few years it would also overwhelm most garden perennials. We keep our ‘rose hedge’ firmly in its designated place by mowing a ten foot wide ‘lawn path’ between the cultivated flowerbed and the wilder hedgerow behind.

It will never rain roses. When we want to have more roses, we must nurture more roses.

Author Hinda Miller Shares Her Journey Through Business, Politics, and the Human Spirit in "Pearls of a Sultana"

A new book by Vermont author Hinda Miller is championing a new form of feminism. Called "Pearls of a Sultana" (The Public Press, 2012) the book is a summary of what she has learned about business, politics, and the human spirit.

Ms. Miller is perhaps best known as the co-inventor of the Jogbra, the original sports bra that enabled millions of women to participate more comfortably in athletics. Eventually, the company was sold to a corporate giant, and Ms. Miller became a business executive and then went on to a new career as a State Senator and board member.

Throughout all her ventures, Hinda Miller has been guided and anchored by a strong connection to the practice of yoga.

Now she is preparing for a new venture as a Sultana, a woman of experience and wisdom who is always practicing, always learning, and always grateful. Her book traces this journey.

Currently Hinda Miller is a five-term Vermont State Senator who has just announced her retirement, or as she phrases it, her "retyment." She has been a Vermont State Senator since 2003. As vice chair of economic development committee and member of appropriations committee, she has championed legislation promoting the creative economy, green environmental technologies, and complementary medicine as part of quality health care.

Born in Canada, Ms. Miller has been a resident of Burlington, Vermont since 1977, where she lives with her husband, Dr. Joel Miller. She received a BFA from Parson's School of Design & MFA from New York University as well as an Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters from Trinity College.

Before her life in the Vermont Senate, she enjoyed a successful career as an entrepreneur, corporate executive, visiting university professor, corporate director, community activist, and yoga teacher. In 1977, she co-founded Jogbra, Inc., the original maker of the Jogbra women's sports garment. After growing the business into a national brand and selling the company to Sara Lee Corp., Hinda continued on as President, CEO & Spokesperson from 1990-1997.

Ms. Miller presently sits on the board of directors of Green Mountain Coffee Roasters, Inc. as Chair of the Corporate Social Responsibility and Governance Committees. She is also on the board of the New England Culinary Institute, and is a Trustee Emeritus of Champlain College.

Ms. Miller believes that a strong inner voyage for self-knowledge is the foundation of a successful and purposeful life. She has continually tried to bring spiritual practice into worldly endeavors, always practicing the integration of the material and spiritual world. To that end, she has been a seeker and student of yoga for over 30 years, teaching yoga to inmates, teenage moms, and women.

She now plans to devote herself to the Sultanas, an informal group of wise, elder women who have the wisdom and experience to make dramatic changes in the world.

About Ms. Miller, Peter Welch, Vermont's representative in Congress has said "Hinda is a different breed of state senator who combined a successful, if unconventional, career in business with an acute and sensitive appreciation of life's spiritual dimension. It made her special in the rough and tumble of politics. And, to the surprise of many, it has made her very effective."

Pearls of a Sultana by Hinda Miller is available at your bookseller or from the publisher for $23.95, (includes shipping, handling, and tax), at Public Press, 100 Gilead Brook Rd., Randolph, VT 05060. (802) 234-9101. You can order online at TheSultanas.com. Visit ThePublicPress.com.

Children's Book Reviews

Summer Garden Time

For something unusual for your children to grow, try moonflowers, a climbing vine of the morning glory family with heart-shaped flowers that bloom only at night! A beautifully-illustrated book, The Moonflower by Peter and Jean Loewer, (Peachtree Publishers, $15.95) shows how hawkmoths pollenate the flowers at night only to have them wilt in the early morning light. But new buds are waiting to open the next night, and so the flower keeps reappearing! Bringing the night life further into focus the authors treat us to spectacular drawings of nighttime animals like bats, hawks, owls, mice and insects like moths, fireflies, and crickets, all enjoying the company of this nighttime flower. As an added treat one can learn why owls can see so well, how fireflies make light, and other surprises of the natural world.

For an enjoyable trip into garden land echoing the rhyme "The House That Jack Built," join colorfully dressed children in Isabella's Garden by Glenda Millard and illustrated by Rebecca Cool (Candlewick Press, $16.99). Verses tell the story: "These are the flowers that waltz with the wind that ruffles the buds, all velvety skinned, that swelled the shoots that sought the sun that kissed the clouds that cried the rain that soaked the seeds that slept in the soil, all dark and deep in Isabella's garden."

A bird with a scarlet breast hatches a chick for all to see; the flowers grow; and the children play, climbing in an apple tree. Fall approaches as does a praying mantis who comes to warn that winter is on the way. Yet, seeds are there sleeping for next year in "the soil, all deep and dark." The drawings are enchanting.

A Vermont Hill Town in The Civil War

— Peacham's Story —

Compiled and Edited by Jutta R. Scott and Michelle Arnosky Sherburne with an essay by Lynn A. Bonfield

(Published by The Peacham Historical Association)

This remarkable and touching story tells how one small Vermont town, Peacham, (population then 1,247) responded to President Lincoln's call in April, 1861, for service in militias to fight to preserve the Union in a Civil War between the North and South states.

Like countless other communities, Peacham, already the home of a vigorous anti-slavery movement, responded enthusiastically with an initial contingent of 55 volunteers that went on to serve in the 3rd, 4th and 6th Vermont Regiments which would become part of the famous Vermont Brigade.

The immediate impact at home was the loss of a father and sons needed to run the small family farms or other village businesses. But we learn the women and children managed on their own, for the war effort.

Peacham soldiers also served in a number of other units that fought at Lee's Mill, Antietam, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, Cold Harbor, Petersburg and many other Union battles.

Who were these soldiers and what happened to them?

Compiled here are biographies of the 168 Peacham soldiers, including photographs of 21. We learn that the war took a heavy toll with 43 killed in action, or dying from wounds or war-related diseases, including deaths from the deplorable conditions as prisoners of war in Confederate prison camps. Five other soldiers with Peacham connections also were war casualties.

The first Peacham-born soldier killed in action was Hazen B. Hooker, who lost his life in the Battle of the Wilderness on May 5, 1864.

During his two years of service Hazen wrote 75 letters of his experiences to his family and friends, eight of which are reproduced in full in this book. Five days before he was killed, he wrote his grandfather: "Perseverance overcometh all things. This may be the last opportunity that I shall ever have. We are in all probability about to make a grand movement upon the enemy, and ere you receive this, the booming cannon may be heard where now is all quiet and peaceful."

He had also written home about having to bury the arms and legs cut off of wounded soldiers, and how at one time his brigade captured 2,000 prisoners. "They were smart intelligent men, well dressed."

He also urged his parents not to write "such mournful letters." He wanted to hear "how much the oxen girth, how many times the horse strap broke on the old lumber wagon which I rode many miles. Do not pitch your letters in a minor. The major key we soldiers want is lively and full of right hopes of the future."

Several Peacham men were prisoners-of-war, and five died in Confederate prisons.

This book contains a chronicle of life in the infamous Andersonville Prison which housed 30,000-45,000 Union prisoners during its 14-month existence. Of those soldiers, 13,000 died from over-crowding, unsanitary conditions, poor diet, and the lack of immunity against typhoid fever, malaria and other camp diseases.

One of those prisoners was a 22-year-old Peacham farmer, Mark Wheeler. He writes about the filth and stench, the mosquito and lice infestations, and how he and his uncle, Newcomb Martin, also of Peacham, would eat bugs "the only fresh meat we had in prison." His uncle died in the prison from diarrhea.

In an unusual war story, Wheeler recalls that a majority of the prisoners appealed to the prison authorities about a gang of prison guards who stole from, terrorized and killed prisoners at night.

As a result a prisoner-based police force and court was authorized to capture and prosecute the offenders. Six ring-leaders, all ex-convicts, who had been released from Southern prisons to fight the war for the South, were caught and tried. They were executed on the gallows built by Union prisoners on July 11, 1864. "It was the first time I ever saw a man hang and I hope it will be the last time," Wheeler wrote.

His 105 hand-written pages were transcribed by Michelle Arnosky Sherburne, one of the contributors to this book. Wheeler returned to Peacham after the war and resumed his life as a farmer. He married three times, and had five children.

For a day-to-day account of the Civil War from the vantage point of a foot soldier, we can read the diary of 21-year-old Issac Watts, describing arduous camp life—its long marches with 60-pound packs and constantly cleaning his rifle—to major engagements of the war including the Battle of Opequon near Winchester on September 19, 1864, and his eye-witness account of General Philip Sheridan's famous rally ride that marked the turning point in the battle of Cedar Creek on October 19, 1864. And he writes:

"The rebels commenced an attack as early as 3 a.m. and by daylight the 8th and 9th corps were flanked and falling back very fast. We got orders and started on the double quick at sunrise and were soon among them. We fell back two or three miles, fighting to keep the Johnnies in check and losing lots of men. Gen. Sheridan arrived at 10 and soon matters turned. At 4 p.m. we charged on them and drove them back in good shape over the road where the Cav. took them and captured lots of men, retaking the artillery and wagons they took from us in the morning. Our loss was heavy but I don't know how many."

Another vivid war experience was recalled many years later by Turrell Elkins Harriman who was 15 years old when he enlisted in the 8th Vermont Regiment. In 1901 he wrote 10 letters to his youngest sister Kate Hamilton about the war, describing its grueling marches of 20 to 30 miles a day in the heat. He recalled capturing prisoners, sharpshooting, intense fighting, dealing with ticks, lice, the lack of water, and being in trenches day and night. He reminds us that he was among the Union forces sent by ocean steamer down the East Coast around Florida to Mississippi and Louisiana where a Union force of 18,000 troops were mustered. He took part in a 42-day siege of Port Hudson, a rebel fortification on the Mississippi River south of Vicksburg.

In all the stories about the war we learn that mail from home was extremely important. Many of their letters ask for food, money, and warm blankets, quilts and clothing. Maple sugar or cookies made their day!

We learn that the items most prized were: "needles, black thread, stocking yarn, small pocket handkerchiefs, envelopes with postage stamps on them, little papers of tea, lark spur seed, and a fine comb."

Peacham women made and sent clothing and foodstuffs to the soldiers. They cared for the returning sick soldiers and attended the dead. Fund-raisers allowed them to purchase needed materials for making quilts and clothing, slippers, and sheets, even small horse hair and feather pillows and cushions for wounded limbs.

Hazen B. Hooker

A Peacham, VT soldier, he was the first Peacham-born casualty and was killed in the Wilderness Battle. The Peacham Civil War book features a biography and six of his letters.

Peacham's part in the Civil War for helping to preserve the Union and its end to slavery are well documented here as was its celebration when the war was finally over as reported in the newspaper Caledonian of that time:

"Church and tea bells were rung, salutes fired, bonfires lighted, and never before was the quiet little town of Peacham in such wild excitement. All the dwellings were more brilliantly lighted than ever on any former occasion..."

Jutta R. Scott, president of the Peacham Historical Association, said the work took two years to research and complete, but how fortunate they were in having the story told by so many enlisted men—the army privates—and their eyewitness to history.

A Vermont Hill Town in The Civil War—Peacham's Story, compiled and edited by Jutta R. Scott and Michelle Arnosky Sherburne with an essay by Lynn A. Bonfield, can be ordered from the Peacham Historical Society for $25 plus $5 for postage and handling.

To purchase, mail a check to: Larry Jensen, Treasurer, Peacham Historical Association, PO Box 101, Peacham, VT 05862.

Copies are available the Peacham Library and Peacham Corner Guild. A hard-cover edition for $35 will be available in July. For more information visit www.peachamhistorical.org.

Indian Tree Hill at The Highberg Garden in Woodstock, VT. Open Garden Day is on Saturday, June 16 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Visit Seven Upper Valley Private Gardens Hosted by the Garden Conservancy

The Garden Conservancy's Open Days program for 2012 begins on Saturday, June 16 in Hanover, New Hampshire and Norwich and Woodstock, Vermont. Admission to each private garden is $5, Open Days are rain or shine, and no reservations are required.

On June 16 visit the Bayle & Richard Drubel Garden at 20 Rope Ferry Road, Hanover, NH, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The main gardens are terraced on a slope leading down to Occom Pond, featuring a trough garden, a cutting garden, dwarf conifers, and a large border and vegetable garden at the bottom.

At the Garden of Bill Noble, 724 Bragg Hill Road, Norwich, VT, the Director of Preservation Projects for The Garden Conservancy was challenged to create a garden appropriate to the site, once a hillside farm with views of distant mountains. An old-fashioned mixed border resides alongside other shrubs and perennials chosen for texture and foliage. The gardens are open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., June 16.

Indian Tree Hill—The Highberg Garden at 1497 Randall Road, Woodstock, VT, has evolved over the last thirty years into a space of meandering paths, creative use of native stone, extensive alpine collections, sculptured steel archway and gates, all used within a natural setting with intimate appeal. The owner, Patsy Highberg, is a recipient of the 2012 Linc and Timmy Foster Millstream Garden of Merit award of the North American Rock Garden Society. The June 16 open garden hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Save the dates for additional Open Garden Days in Vermont and New Hampshire. They include a July 1 date featuring waterfalls and koi ponds, a Knot Garden, and striking architectural elements at The North Forte garden in Wilmington, VT; a fieldstone cottage modeled after Henry David Thoreau's Walden Pond cabin, and a foot bridge crossing a woodland stream at Bill & Judy Moran's Garden in Alstead Center, NH; and a rolling hay field transformed into a four-season sculpture garden at the Distant Hill Gardens of Michael & Kathy Nerrie in Walpole, NH.

On August 11, admire extensive planted terra cotta pots, a pair of ninety-foot-long perennial borders, and garden rooms galore at Gordon & Mary Hayward's Garden in Westminster West, VT, as well as a second chance to visit The North Forte Garden in Wilmington.

These Open Days gardens are featured in the 2012 Open Days Directory; a soft-cover book that includes detailed driving directions and descriptions written by their owners.

The directory includes garden listings in nineteen states and costs $21.95 including shipping. Visit www.opendaysprogram.org or call the Garden Conservancy toll-free at 1-888-842-2442 to order with a Visa, MasterCard or American Express, or send a check or money order to: the Garden Conservancy, P.O. Box 219, Cold Spring, NY 10516. Discount admission tickets are available as well through advanced mail order.

The 2012 Open Days program is generously sponsored by Fine Gardening magazine as its National Media Sponsor. Fine Gardening magazine brings you breathtaking design ideas, helpful techniques, and the know-how to get great results in your own garden.

The Garden Conservancy introduced the Open Days program in 1995 as a means of introducing the public to gardening, providing easy access to outstanding examples of design and horticultural practice, and proving that exceptional American gardens are still being created. The Open Days program is America's only national private garden-visiting program, and is made possible by the work of hundreds of volunteers nationwide.
