The Guilford Festival Orchestra performs in the Annual Labor Day Weekend Festival in Guilford, VT.

Friends of Music at Guilford 48th Annual Labor Day Weekend Festival

Friends of Music at Guilford's 48th Annual Labor Day Weekend Festival in Guilford, VT presents organ music by French composers in an intimate rural barn and also pays tribute to Wagner, Verdi, and Mascagni in an orchestra concert that includes works by other composers on the expansive lawn just outside.

Saturday concert

The Festival opens on Saturday evening, August 31, at 7:30 with "Vive la France!" on the c. 1897 Guilford Tracker Organ. Clark Anderson has planned a program of solo organ repertoire from the early 13th century to the late 20th century by Pérotin le Grand, François Couperin, Jean Joseph Mouret, André Raison, Louis-Claude Daquin, Alexandre Boëly, Louis Vierne, Jean Langlais, Charles Gounod, and the ever-intriguing Anonymous. Mr. Anderson's informative and entertaining commentary is sure to offer listeners a valuable music history lesson.

This will be Mr. Anderson's third appearance at the Organ Barn. In May 2011 he performed music from the German and English baroque era, and then in September 2012 a program entitled "The Magnificent Mr. Handel," both with assistance from a few Guilford Chamber Players. In addition to his role as occasional featured organist for Friends of Music, Mr. Anderson has been conducting Brattleboro's annual holiday Messiah Sing for Friends of Music since 2011.

Outdoors on Sunday

The following day, Sunday, September 1, at 2 p.m., the Guilford Festival Orchestra will be heard outdoors on the lawn. Ken Olsson will serve as conductor for this event for a second season though he has been performing with Friends of Music in other roles over the past few years. Devoted organ concert fans will remember how he heroically presided at the keyboard on Labor Day Weekend in 2011, after Tropical Storm Irene, which left his house in Jamaica cut off from the rest of the world for a week, and in February 2012 served as piano accompanist for his wife, soprano Julie Johnson Olsson, in a vocal recital at Guilford Community Church. The Olssons were also recently featured at the organization's spring recital in the Organ Barn on Memorial Day weekend.

This year's Sunday orchestra program features anniversary nods to Wagner, Verdi, and Mascagni, as well as the premiere of a piece by Nick Humez, a Friends of Music founder who has contributed many pieces to this event over the years and works by Bartok and CPE Bach. Elgar's "Romance for Bassoon and Strings" will feature Tiffany Coolidge as soloist. The Wagner segment features three "Wesendonck" songs performed by soprano Julie Johnson Olsson.

The festival's traditional finale is an a cappella sing-in of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," for which audience members are invited up front to join orchestra members in forming the chorus.

How to find us...

The Labor Day Weekend Festival is held at the Organ Barn on Kopkind Rd., in Guilford, VT. Signs are posted along a nine-mile route from the Guilford Country Store on Rt. 5, just south of Exit 1 off I-91, and along a five-mile route from the Keets Brook Rd. turnoff along Rt. 5 in Bernardston, MA.

Admission to both events is by donation. For the Sunday concert, the grounds open at noon to picnickers. A hearty vegetarian lunch, warm chocolate chip cookies, and fresh lemonade are available for sale.

In case of rain, or serious threat thereof, the Sunday event—both lunch and concert—will be relocated to Broad Brook Grange on the Guilford Center Rd., four miles from the Guilford Country Store, which is just over a mile from Exit 1 off I-91 along Rt. 5 South.

Woodstock, VT Late Summer Events at Billings Farm & Museum

Celebrating its 30th anniversary, Billings Farm & Museum has served as a gateway to Vermont's rural heritage for over a million visitors and 100,000 of the region's school children. Billings Farm is an operating Jersey dairy farm that continues a 142-year tradition of agricultural excellence and offers farm programs and historical exhibits that explore Vermont's rural heritage and values. Each season offers special events. Here are some for August.

Heritage Chicken Day

Billings Farm & Museum, is featuring Heritage Chicken Day on Saturday, August 3, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Traditional livestock breeds are an essential part of our agricultural heritage and an important resource for the future. We'll feature a variety of heritage chickens breeds to learn about their unique traits-all are protected breeds of The American Livestock Breeds Conservancy, a nonprofit membership organization working to conserve over 180 historic breeds of livestock and poultry and maintain genetic diversity.

See newly hatched chicks and learn all about eggs. Chicken-themed activities and programs for children include stenciling, stories, and make-it-and-take crafts and games.

13th Annual Antique Tractor Day

The 13th Annual Antique Tractor Day takes place on Sunday, August 11, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. featuring restored and unrestored tractors, dating from the 1930s to the 1960s. A narrated tractor parade is set for 1 p.m.—an opportunity to see the machines operating, with interesting and historical background details about each tractor. Tractor-drawn wagon rides will be offered; make-it-take-it wooden tractors for children, a toy tractor sandbox, ice cream making, and more.

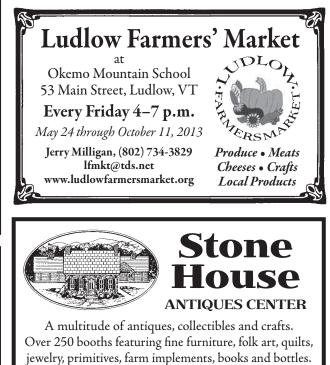

Lunch and snacks will be sold by the Teago Volunteer Fire in the tradition dovetails with the museum's mission of Department-all proceeds benefit the department.

27th Annual Ouilt Exhibition

Billings Farm & Museum hosts the 27th Annual Quilt Exhibition from August 1 to September 22, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. featuring quilts made by quilters residing in Windsor County, Vermont. The exhibition will include quilting activities and demonstrations for every age and skill level, with quilters on hand to discuss their work.

Challenge quilts made by The Heart of the Land Quilters will also be exhibited. This year's theme is "Crayon Challenge." A quilt challenge requires specific design and construction rules agreed upon by guild members, with the goal of improving their quilting skills. The challenge quilts will be on display with the juried exhibition.

During the past quarter-century, Billings Farm & Museum has played a significant role promoting and encouraging the quilting tradition in Windsor County. Still considered both a creative and utilitarian household craft, renewed interest

We Have Large, Well Spaced

More Than a Century Past Two Brothers from Reading, Vermont —

Editor's Note—Imagine 150 years ago how hard it must "bug-grinder," etc. The water drops thrown from the little have been for young people to leave Vermont when they were expected to remain forever "down on the farm." Two brothers, Stillman Robinson, born in 1838, and Albert Robinson, born in 1844, of South Reading, VT, didn't let their humble beginnings on a farm prevent them from achieving extraordinary careers. Here, excerpted from The History of Reading, VT (1903), learn how these boys grew up, and compare it with what young people experience today. We'll tell you then what happened to them!

About Stillman Robinson as a young boy...

"At eight years of age he was taken from school for part of the time, that he might more fully serve as a farm hand. At ten years, his father died, and he was placed in charge of another farmer, until 16, which year he was put partly on the farm and partly in running a saw-mill and erecting a lumber and grist-mill. This work was more to the young man's taste, which taste was strongly made known as early as two and a half years of age, when he watched with surprise and spell-bound interest, the operating of the spinning wheel, as it was put in motion to spin the annual "frocking," from which to cut the farm garments. Not only this wheel, but the reel, scarns, loom, etc., for producing this web, riveted the attention of the child.

As days and years went past, this youngster was found making little water wheels which were establishing in the water guzzles, with string belts to run the little mill, the wheel, were called mosquitoes by the father, who would come along and issue the very unwelcome order, "come, put away your mosquito wheels now, and go out to picking up stone." These stones were always found lying plentifully on a recently seeded down field in this part of Reading, requiring to be gathered into heaps and drawn away. A few minutes to tinker at mechanical play in the "shop room" was frequently obtained by running ahead of the men at dinner horn blast. Rainy days, when "shop tinkering" could go on, were hailed with delight.

At fifteen, a violin was brought out of the "shop room," which was prized above most others for energy and quality of tone. All this mechanical work was so delighted in, that he never tired, while the farm work had no charms whatever.

..Without stopping to work at his trade, he left Vermont in the spring of 1860, with stencil tools for cutting name plates by the way, and with eight dollars in his pocket, his total capital, to make his way westward, cutting stencils by the way, to take studies at the University of Michigan, at which he arrived withe $50.00 in his pocket."

What Stillman Robinson went on to achieve...

Stillman Robinson went on to become an author, inventor, (over 50 inventions) engineering expert, and college professor. He wanted a degree in Mechanical Engineering, but none were available then, so he later founded a Mechanical Engineering program at the University of Illinois where its "shop" combined hands-on mechanical training with theory. It became the prototype of shop courses at high schools and colleges across the country. He wrote college textbooks, was a professor, department chairman, college dean, railroad inspector and consulting engineer for such projects as the iron frame work and mountings for the great Lick Telescope. His inventions included shoe and boot manufacturing equipment, photographic and optical devices (double eyepiece for telescope), and even a hypodermic syringe!

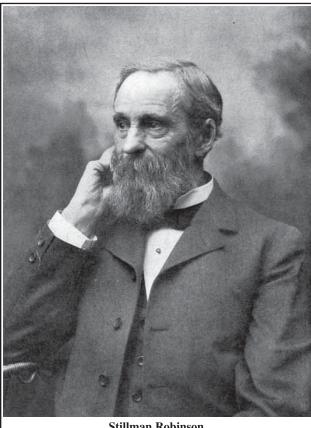

About Albert Robinson as a child...

"It was when Albert Robinson was less than four years old, that his father died, leaving him to the care of his widowed mother, who, after some two years, and until she was remarried in 1856, placed him out to earn his living. Most of this time he was with his uncle, Lewis Robinson, a manufacturer, publisher, stove dealer, farmer, etc., by whom, and among which occupations, the child was given employment.

When some six years old he was sent to Windsor, Vt., a distance of twelve miles, with a horse, and a load of washboards for delivery. Notwithstanding his youth, the load was delivered correctly, but his judgment for the old horse was less correct, for next morning it was found dead in the pasture, from colic, induced probably by the long drive, extending into the night. However the commercial part of the transaction appears to have been executed as satisfactorily, as some of his railroad dealings of later years.

In one instance, at about the same age he was sent with a horse and buggy, a distance of sixteen miles, to bring him home a son of his uncle. On arriving at the school to find the object of his coming, and while seated in his buggy, he asked of some students passing "where is Calvin?" These went up into the schoolroom and reported to Calvin L. Robinson that "there is one of the nicest little boys you ever saw out here in a buggy inquiring for Calvin." Thus the sixteen mile trip was correctly accomplished. The youth was often sent on trips with success remarkable, for one so young, producing a most favorable impression upon all he met, for manlike and gentlemanly behavior.

At the age of seventeen he commenced his four years' college course, taking, as was not common, two degrees in the time for one."

What Albert Robinson made of his life...

Albert Robinson went on to study at the University of Michigan where he earned two engineering degrees at the same time. While in college he worked part-time for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe RR, driving "slope stakes." Then he worked his way up from such jobs as "axeman, chainman, levelman and transitman" to engineering and management positions, finally culminating a 30-year career as president of the Mexico Central RR. Some 4,500 miles of rail lines in the West and Midwest were built under his planning and supervision. His expertise was figuring out what to do with "steep grades, sharp curves and heavy traffic."

Raspberries 🦛

The Delight of Summer and Fall

We all love raspberries-red, black, purple and gold. Sometimes we hold our breath between summer and fall, hoping there will be a good late crop. We buy them at farmer's markets and pick them at pick-your-pen fields. If we're clever we freeze a few-or a lot-to use in deep winter, reminding us that one day the snows will melt and we'll go to the fields to gather our favorite berries. Here are some recipes to use

SOUR CREAM RASPBERRY PIE

- 1/2 tsp vanilla extract 2 tablespoons flour 2 tsp brown sugar 2 tsp butter, melted

In a bowl, combine 3/4 cup sugar and flour. Whisk in sour cream and vanilla. Arrange the raspberries evenly in the pie shell. Spread sour cream mixture over the berries. Combine flour, 2 teaspoons sugar, and melted butter or margarine, until mixture forms crumbles. Sprinkle over pie. Bake at 400°F (205°C) for 30 to 40 minutes, or until pastry and filling are golden. Cool on rack. Serve same day at room temperature.

CURRIED CHICKEN SALAD WITH RASPBERRIES

Heat olive oil in a cooking pan, add chicken breasts and sauté for 5 minutes turn over and sauté for 5 more minutes or until done. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Remove from pan and cool in refrigerator for 20-30 minutes. Cut meat into one inch cubes. Combine mayonnaise, wine, chutney, curry powder, lemon juice and ginger in a large bowl. Add chicken onions, celery and raisins and raspberries, toss to coat. Season with salt and pepper. Immediately before serving add cashews. Serve on a bed of lettuce or in

Into mixing bowl, add corn meal, soda, salt, buttermilk, egg; stir well. Add maple and stir well. Add raspberries, fold into mixture without mashing them. Pour into a well greased iron skillet and bake slow at 350° until pone begins to brown. Reduce heat to 200° until cooked.

RASPBERRY COBBLER

2 ¹ / ₂ cups raspberries	¹ / ₄ teaspoon salt
² / ₃ cup sugar	1 stick plus 2 tablespoons
1 ¹ / ₂ cups flour	butter
1 tablespoon baking powder	$\frac{1}{2}$ cup heavy cream

Preheat oven to 350°. Butter an 8x8 inch shallow baking dish. Place raspberries in the dish and sprinkle with ¹/₃ cup of sugar. Combine flour, baking powder and salt. Add the stick of butter in pieces and create a lumpy mixture. Add cream and combine until dough forms. Dough will be soft and sticky like a biscuit; if need be, add a splash more of cream. Spoon dough over the raspberries. Melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter and drizzle over the mounds of dough. Sprinkle with remaining ¹/₃ cup sugar. Bake about 30 to 40 minutes or until dough and fruit are cooked through and dough is lightly browned. Serve with whipped cream. Serves 6-8.

Study in Circles

by Burr Morse

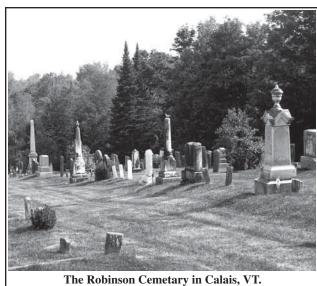

My brother Elliott and I stand looking at the prostrate stone of Joel Robinson up at the Robinson Cemetery in Calais, Vermont. Elliott has recently glued its two halves back together after nature took its toll years ago and our mission today is to get the stone back upright. We stand there for a longer time than is necessary, not so much to admire Elliott's handy work but to observe a moment of silence for our great, great, great, great grandfather.

The rest of my yarn could be described as a "study in circles." The first "circle" is one from Rehoboth, Massachusetts to Calais, Vermont and back to Rehoboth. Joel Robinson hailed from Rehoboth, a town fifty miles southwest of Boston and, according to the U.S. Census Bureau, "hilly and swampy with most of its brooks and swamps feeding into the Palmer River..." Back in 1792, something stirred Joel to trek 241 miles through the wilderness to Calais. The question of what stirred him is answered at best by speculation but I'm betting it had something to do with geography. You see, Joel was a sawyer of lumber which, in those days, required the special geographic offerings of "hills, swamps, and brooks."

"Ancient Lane Mill...after more than two hundred years of retirement, sliced through a spruce log by water power."

It so happened that there was some land available in Calais where there is a brook fed by swampy headwaters of what is now Curtis Pond. Somehow, Joel Robinson found out about this land and came up to investigate. My guess is that he found the Vermont "power" possibilities a sawyer's Garden of Eden compared to the smaller hills and slower brooks of southern Massachusetts (think of a Cummins diesel compared to a lawnmower motor). He wasted no time in sewing up the deal and returning to Rehoboth to fetch his family (and in those days, t'weren't no four hours down I-89!)

Joel Robinson's water-powered sawmill, built in 1803 in Caiais, VT.

Joel first built a mill pond at a location where the ledges could be used as buttresses to support a flag stone dam. He soon had a pond both sizable and deep enough to supply sufficient head for powering his "up and down" saw rig. The last step in his plan was to build a mill, the Robinson Sawmill, which still stands to this day.

Over ten years ago our Uncle Bernard Morse and Elliot plied their mechanical talents to make the Robinson Mill run again. It was no easy achievement but after two years and a lot of hours, they finally opened the gate and let Joel's mill pond perform its magic. In June of 2001, the ancient Lane Mill (an update to Joel's original rig), after more than two hundred years of retirement, sliced through a spruce log by water power! Elliott said there was a big crowd watching including six folks in wheelchairs. "Some had tears in their eyes," he said.

The second "circle" of this yarn has to do with people and their never ending quest to harness renewable energy from the earth. These days solar panels multiply like rabbits and wind turbines dot Vermont ridge lines bringing us "full circle" from the days when water power was king. The water power necessary to power Grandpa Joel's sawmill, alas, has been trumped by what some would call political correctness; others, environmental prudence. The mill pond up at Robinson Saw Mill has silted in over the years and needs to be dredged. Repeated efforts by Elliott Morse to gain permission to dredge have come up dry every time.

'Thou shall not tamper with public water!" say the people. Elliott recently told me that the Robinson Mill will never run again.

Back at Robinson Cemetery, Elliott and I end our moment of silence, muckle on over to Grandpa Joel's stone and heft it upright with a grunt. "There," says Elliott, "back where it was in 1832 when Joel Robinson died."

It was how he punctuated his last comment, however, that struck me: "That's all we can do for him anymore." May Joel Robinson and his working sawmill rest in peace.

A Vermont Almanack for Late Summer 🦛

by Bill Felker

And the days began to walk. And they, the days, made us, And thus we were born, The children of the days, The discoverers, Life's searchers.

-Genesis, according to the Mayas

The Phases of the Sweet Corn Moon and the Blackberry Moon

Dark blackberries usher in the season of late summer. When they are ripe enough to pick, then all the crickets and katydids are singing through the nights, and the first bird migrations are underway. August 6: The Sweet Corn Moon becomes the new Blackberry Moon at 4:51 p.m. August 14: The moon enters its second quarter at 5:56 a.m. August 20: The moon is full at 8:45 p.m. August 28: The moon enters its last phase at 4:35 a.m.

The Sun's Progress

August 22 is Cross-Quarter Day and marks the halfway point between summer solstice and autumn equinox. The sun enters Virgo on the same day.

The Planets

Jupiter and Mars in Gemini shine in the east before dawn. Venus and Saturn, both in Virgo, lie in the far west after sundown.

The Stars

August is the month of the Milky Way in the eastern early night sky. Cygnus the Swan can be found there, its formation a giant cross or like a goose in flight. Below it is Aquila, spreading from its keystone, Altair, like a great eagle. Almost directly overhead, Vega of the constellation Lyra is the brightest star in the heavens. Hercules stands beside it. June's Corona Borealis and the huge Arcturus have moved to the west. An hour or two before sunrise, Orion is rising, in the same position it has on Christmas Eve. The Pleiades and Taurus are almost overhead. Cygnus is setting in the northwest.

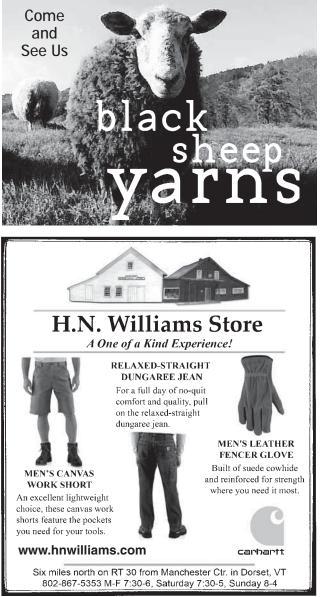

The Shooting Stars

August 11–12: Late summer's meteors are the Perseids. Find them, up to 60 per hour, near Perseus in the northeastern sky. This will be the best meteor shower of the summer, and the moon will be dark.

Ragweed Time

The first week of ragweed time is the first week of late summer. It is the time that wood nettle goes to seed in the bottomlands, the time that wild cherries ripen. Blackberries are ready to eat when ragweed blossoms. Golden and purple coneflowers, and red, pink and violet phlox still dominate the gardens. And the season's second-last wave of wildflowers come into bloom throughout the woods and open fields.

Four Songs Against Late Summer

by Bill Felker

Altered Time

Through much of my life, my most unsettling dreams have been those in which the world that should have been familiar has changed, and the old streets are no longer what they were. The houses and trees that used to serve as markers no longer look the way they used to look. No one knows who I am.

Seasonal transformations remind me of the truth those visions hold. It seemed to me just a little while ago that summer would last forever. But the leaves darken and start to fall. The times of peonies and iris, yellow sweet clover and meadow rue have been covered over, and the old way is gone.

At the cusp of summer, against the looming, repeating dream of autumn, I hold tightly to images of presence: late black raspberries, bright zinnias, fields of black-eyed Susans, the chant of the cicada.

There is no recourse to the uncertainty of past or future dreams, nothing but this lily or that butterfly.

The experience of altered time and place is not a trick or a gimmick or an illusion or a nightmare fright. The warm tomato and sweet corn and the blood-red dahlia from the garden today are the only allies we have, and the awareness of their presence is the gift of great price.

The Meaning of Summer

Once in a while, I wonder about the meaning of summer, and that, of course, is a thought too far.

So, I tell myself, just stay with what is here in front of me. If I go back to spring or early summer, in my memory, I throw the wheel of time way out of kilter, and I wobble in its remnants and its chaff and clutter, the fallen mulberries and the sweet rocket seeds, the hay and the straw, the fledglings grown and the turquoise eggs that were flung and lost in the storms of May: regret and nostalgia and reminiscence.

And if I go ahead to the future, I burst headlong into the clutches of autumn, its thrilling, dishevelled embrace that leads, of course, to bare and chilling winter.

In the face of all that, there is nothing like the firm, bright world that seems to lie before me today: Tall coneflowers still so strong. Bumblebees in the sweet milkweed. Along the roadsides, Canadian thistledown coming undone in wads, spreading puffed and unruly across the fields. Sticky burdock in bloom in the alley, buckeyes maybe three-fourths full size in the park. The first elderberries turning purple by the pond. So long as I am able, I will collect and hold the immediate pieces of the world. There is no God outside these things, nor should there be, I mean the God made flesh, of course: All things flutter and sing within that presence.

that the entire year is collapsing, and that there is too much left to feel and do.

I struggle to find footholds with which to keep my balance in time. I want to understand everything that is happening to nature and to me, but I get distracted by thinking and trying to know, and then I lose my place and fall away from the path.

Of course, there is nothing except the summer itself if I simply talk the walk: Only words make the world. Nothing exists outside the reach of a voice. I look at the ground and turn it into truth: two ants, a clump of grass, a dandelion gone to seed, a housefly, a mosquito near my foot, a broken twig.

If I pause or stop or wonder or wish or want, the real summer becomes longings and nostalgias and regrets and reminiscence,

So I pull myself back and talk the walk again: the black walnut fallen to the sidewalk, the fat Osage fruit thumping to the back garden.

I exercise the discipline of litany and of listing events, trusting that events in words accumulate, that more and more and more will be enough.

This is wishful thinking, I am well aware. It is nervous chatter that distracts me from what might really lie behind the shortening of the days.

Still, memory and hope are the vultures of the word and the present. They rip and tear the flesh of my litany, my summer chant.

So if I can stay here, without stopping, without looking back or forward, I will keep my balance. I will talk and talk the walk.

Watching Clouds

Once when my wife was in the hospital and we were waiting for her to be discharged, we ran out of words and thoughts, and we ended up just watching the lanky altostratus clouds that slowly moved across the sky outside her window.

It was a muggy and windless day in August, and the clouds barely moved or changed their shapes. Sometimes they seemed like animals, sometimes they didn't. Sometimes they gradually faded back into the haze or disappeared into the dark green trees of the horizon below them.

Eventually, we divided them up, chose which clouds ere mine and which were hers. Sometimes mine seemed to move faster than hers. Sometimes hers seemed to move faster than mine. There was no point to any of our judgments except that they focused us outside the room, outside the waiting, and we accepted that nothing was actually happening. And it was all right that nothing was happening. Now these late summer days, I watch sleepy, languid clouds with more intent than I ever did before. When the weather is sultry and still, they remind me of the arbitrary shapes of that August afternoon, and I think about a new awareness in me that has prompted resolutions - like to always play with my dog when she wants to play and to always give my cat the most expensive cat food just because he likes it. The clouds this year have the same lessons to teach me about patience and waiting and expectations and caring, about what is happening and what is not happening. And their most important lesson is very simply that there may be nothing better than watching them with the person next to me.

Talking the Walk

It seems to me now that the spin of the world is speeding up, that time is moving more quickly than it did just a month ago. It seems that late summer is sinking around me, and

North Country Reflections

by Judith Irven

It's a common lament: 'My garden is shady and boring. All I can grow are hostas!'

I beg to differ. I delight in shady garden spaces—cool, tranquil places for people, and home for plenty of interesting plants.

Dick and I love to retreat, cup of tea in hand, to a favorite garden bench under the trees, a private outdoor room complete with leafy ceiling, richly patterned carpet and view to the sunny border beyond.

While a shady corner may not have the color and sizzle of a sun-drenched perennial bed, it is surely the contrast between these complementary spaces that creates a balanced whole. Think of it as the 'yin and yang' of the garden. And, to be complete, a garden needs some of each.

Since most of us are familiar with the yang of an exuberant sunny border, let's take a look at creating counterbalancing yin in a cool shady space.

Trees provide structure

Firstly, to have shade you need trees. Trees also create structure in our gardens, and it behooves us to make the most of them.

With a little thoughtful pruning, you can transform any tree into a living sculpture. Begin by 'pruning it up': remove the lowest branches so that you can walk around unimpeded. This will also let more light reach the plants below. Now prune off any branches that clutter the tree's interior, so that those remaining have space to develop fully. Make your cuts right back to the main trunk or, in the case of multi-stemmed trees and shrubs, at ground level, being careful not to leave short stubs that encourage disease.

As an example of creating structure with trees, about twelve years ago I planted a trio of Shadblow Serviceberries, (Amelanchier canadensis), to frame the corner behind our woodshed. Shadblow Serviceberries are small multistemmed trees that mature at about 12' diameter, so together my three plants created a nice shady bed, approximately 24'x 24', on the ground.

Shadblow Serviceberries also have a lot of branches that left unchecked will grow into in a tangled mess. So I selected the half-dozen strongest stems and removed the rest. I have been rewarded with three delightful vase-shaped trees that add structure and personality to this shady corner.

Shrubs for shady areas

You can also grow shade tolerant shrubs in the vicinity of, but not right under, larger trees, to create eye-level interest in your shady corner.

I am extremely partial to the 'Northern Lights' azaleas —Bright Lights, White Lights, Lilac Lights, etc—bred from the 'Roseshell azalea' that I find growing wild on our local Mount Moosalamoo. My personal favorite is White Lights, which has beautiful creamy-white flowers tinged with pale pink, and blooms in my garden around Memorial Day.

This is followed by a succession of fragrant 'Summerflowering' azaleas, (all bred from our native Swamp Azalea) starting with Weston's Innocence in early June, followed by Pink & Sweet, Parade, and finally Lemon Drop in early August.

The native Ninebark (Physocarpus opufolius) is a robust but rather boring plant that grows in sun or shade. However plant breeders have produced a number of attractive cultivars with either bronze or yellow leaves that add color to a shady garden all season long.

But, before you buy a particular cultivar, be sure to check its final height and choose one that is appropriate for your space. The popular Physocarpus 'Diablo' actually grows quite large (8'-10'), a bit big for many gardens. However the final height and width of 'Summer Wine' is about 6', and 'Little Devil' just 4'—better sizes for smaller spaces.

Viburnums also tolerate shade, but many gardeners are shying away from them because of the recent influx of the dreaded Viburnum Leaf Beetle.

However there are many species of Viburnum and not all of them are vulnerable to the Leaf Beetle. As a case in point, for the past decade I have grown 'Wild Raisin Viburnum, (Viburnum cassinoides) which has been untouched by this pest. Nearby there is an American Cranberry Bush (V. opulus var. americana) that has been completely defoliated in recent years. Note that these are both native species, but it is the leafbeetle which is the import!

Azaleas (White Lights and Bright Lights), together with a carpet of Hostas, Japanese Painted Fern and Ligularia, flourish in Judith's shady front garden.

You can find an excellent list of Viburnum species and their susceptibility to leafbeetle attack on the Cornell Extension website. Species are ranked from 'highly susceptible' (alas, my American Cranberry Bush is among these), 'susceptible', 'moderately susceptible' (my Wild Raisin is listed here), to 'most resistant' (including the wonderfully fragrant Korean Spice Viburnum).

So please don't shun viburnums, but be sure to check the species before you buy!

A compelling spatial plan

Recently I passed a group of in-town houses, each with a long narrow straight bed of hostas hugging the north walls. Not too exciting!!

But, with a little imagination, any one of these beds could be reshaped to create an interesting ground plan. A little widening along the length and a gently curving arc around the corner of the house would make all the difference. This corner spot in turn would make the perfect home for a small shade-tolerant tree like our native pagoda dogwood (Cornus alternifolia).

So, as you contemplate those shady areas around your house, sketch up different ground plans until you find something that will truly contribute to the overall picture, rather than just taking up space! Perhaps you can incorporate a bench as an invitation to stay awhile. You will be surprised what a difference a few shape changes can make!

Seasonal dynamics

There are three seasons in a shade garden: spring flowers, summer tapestries and winter skeletons.

In spring, the sun reaches down to the ground through the leafless trees, and the shady corners of my garden are a riot of early flowers. These early beauties—Bloodroot, Squills, Daffodils, Twinleaf, Virginia Bluebells, Lungwort, Forgetme-nots, Woodland Phlox, Bleeding heart, Globeflower, Blue Poppies, Lady's Slippers and many more—epitomize the excitement of spring. This is a fleeting time, so enjoy it while it lasts!

Mom's

Many shade-loving plants have large leaves—all the better to collect the light— offering a huge variety of shapes and textures for the artistic gardener to play mix-and-match. There are even wonderful color variations to stir your imagination; not all greens are the same and not all leaves are green!!

Here are some suggestions for creating beautiful tapestries of leaves:

Beyond green: Heuchera, Ligularia dentata,

Lacy textures: Ferns, Astilbe, Aconitum, Aruncus

Arrowheads: Epimedium, Polygonatum,

Broad, crinkled surfaces: Alchemilla mollis, Rodgresia, Darmera and ,yes, many beautiful varieties of Hosta too.

The final season is, of course, winter, when your trees and shrubs really standout, especially in the snow. So, as you prune, give thought to how they will look in winter when your efforts will show off to best advantage!

Decorations

Last but not least, use a favorite decoration to create an evocative highlight.

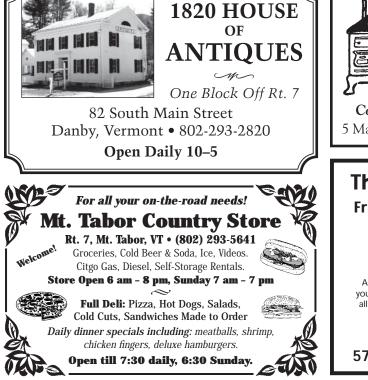

As we have seen, for much of the year, the predominate color in the shade garden is green, making it the perfect backdrop for an eye-catcher such as an elegant pot.

The result will be serene, tranquil, and very yin.

Modern Woodmen of America Carnival & Parade in Wells, VT

The Modern Woodmen of America in Wells, VT will be celebrating their 75th Annual Carnival taking place Wednesday, August 14th through Saturday, August 17th.

There will be entertainment nightly, rides for the kids provided by Family Fun Amusements. Wednesday night we will roll back ride prices to $7.50 Wrist Bands for unlimited rides and Thursday we will offer 75¢ ride tickets. We'll have carnival food of course-hot dogs, hamburgers, sausage & peppers, fried clams, homemade french fries, and fried dough! New this year are jalapeño poppers and mozzarella sticks.

Celebration of community!

Our goal for this annual event is a celebration of the community. Our game prices have stayed the same for many, many years. We have a cake booth, pie booth, blanket booth, dart booth, plush booth, birthday booth, ring toss, bingo of course, our annual money raffle with drawings every night, and our famous dime toss. The Wells Volunteer Fire Department has a booth selling their raffle tickets with four large prizes to lucky winners and free balloons for the kids.

Saturday the day starts with antique tractor pulling at 10 a.m. There will be fun for the kids throughout the day. This year the Parade will step off at 4 p.m. The theme for this year's parade is "Diamond Jubilee." If anyone is interested in joining in the parade, they can call Todd Fenton at (802) 645-9522 or e-mail him at wellsfire@hotmail.com. Saturday will be topped off with the celebration of our 75th year with a Fireworks display at 9:30 p.m.

Popular chicken barbeque

On Saturday at 12 noon there will be a Chicken Barbeque presented by the Ladies Aid of the Wells Methodist Church on the MWA grounds. This 60-year tradition offers a menu of half a barbequed chicken, corn on the cob, cole slaw, potato & macaroni salads, rolls, coffee, tea, and lemonade, with brownies for dessert. For information call (802) 645-0422.

This event is about having a good time with your family and friends. It's the belief of what the Woodmen stand for, helping our friends and family, and our community.

The Modern Woodmen of America is a life insurance company located in Rock Island, Illinois, with fraternal chapters across the U.S.A. The MWA Chapter 10244 in Wells, VT is very active, with bingo as the main fundraiser for area charities. We help build access ramps for those in need, house the area food shelf, donate $$5\bar{0}0$ to fifteen-plus area churches annually, and just gave out a total of over $15,000 in scholarships to area students.

The carnival is held on the Modern Woodmen of America grounds at 10 Main St., Wells, VT. For information call (802) 645-0323.

FLANDERS

-Reminder to Gardeners 🦟

Patience is something gardeners learn As the planets circle, the seasons turn. You may prune the branch. You may feed the root. But you cannot hasten the ripening fruit, Nor bid the blossoming pear tree stay It's fall of snow for a single day.

You may dig the earth. You may sow the seed. You may steel your heart to the blossoming weed. But you cannot loose the gentlest rains, Nor invoke the sun, for all your pains.

Henry Sheldon Museum of Vermont History, 1 Park St. (803) 388-2117. www.henrysheldonmuseum.org. He isn't one to talk too free. If he's interested, it's very hard to see. He'd rather like your heifer in his stall, But would mean to have you know it last of all. His words, like maple, are very close in grain Unflowered things when speaking of your pain, But heart-held. The things he cannot bring Himself to say, as being soft, he keeps within. We notice, with a knowing nod, the way he turned his head So we might hear so clearly the kindness left unsaid.

Farmstead Dairies Can Now Pasteurize, Thanks To Bob-White Systems of South Royalton, VT

development time and gobs of research money being spent, Bob-White Systems in South Royalton, VT is finally introducing their new, innovative and groundbreaking small scale farmstead milk pasteurizer

They call it the LiLi (pronounced Lily) which stands for Low Input/Low Impact. It is very simple and easy to operate and has very low impact on the flavor or nutritional value of the milk.

The LiLi is bound to improve life for the growing numbers of micro-dairy farmers and the people who

After over six years of want to buy fresh, local dairy Maine. Bruns has assured ment for Micro-Dairies milkproducts.

Despite the fact that they designed and built several prototype LiLies during the past several years, the FDA would not approve them because they utilized innovative design details that lowered the cost of the unit and made it easy to operate. Innovation is not part of the FDA's vocabulary.

But now the LiLi is being manufactured for Bob-White Systems under a licensing agreement by the premier dairy processing equipment manufacturer of the northeast, Bruns Bros. of Gray, of the LiLi will be approved. The photo below is the first glimpse the world has ever sneak preview but it is a real beauty!

Bob-White Systems expects the first three to be delivered by the end of July. The mythic LiLi is now a reality. That's what it's all about.

Bob-White Systems provides farmstead dairy consulting services and affordable small-scale dairy equip-

Bob-White that this version ing cows, sheep, goats and even water buffalo. Inspired by the slow food movement, Bob-White Systems supports seen of the LiLi. This is a local, farmstead dairy farmers across the country and aims to increase the availability of locally-produced, safe and delicious farm-fresh milk, cheese and yogurt.

Randolph, VT Chandler Celebrates 21st Annual New World Festival

Sunday, September 1st

Chandler's New World Festival in Randolph, VT enters its third decade with this year's 21st annual festival on Sunday September 1.

The daylong event goes from noon to 11 p.m. on Labor Day Sunday and celebrates the region's Celtic and French American musical heritage brought to northern New England by English, Scottish, Irish and French-Canadian immigrants.

With Main Street closed to traffic, the festival site is an intimate pedestrian village. Nearly 75 of the best regional and international musicians play concerts, offer workshops, play in dance bands, and share tunes and traditions. Once again, the Festival has been designated a Top Ten Fall Event by the Vermont Chamber of Commerce.

A galaxy of performances

This year's performers include Acadian powerhouse trio Vishtèn; Genticorum, leaders of a new generation of traditional music groups from Québec; high-energy dance band Elixir; The Press Gang, a trio with squeeze box, fiddle and guitar; Boston-based Long Time Courting; Dominique Dodge, a harper and singer from Burlington, VT; and Les Poules à Colin, a young trad group from the Lanaudière region of Québec, featuring the offspring of several wellknown traditional musicians.

Performances are in Chandler, in all-weather tents on Main Street, and in Bethany Church. No Strings Marionette will put on puppet shows. There will be performances by young musicians. Dance instruction and crafts are featured in the family tent. The dance tent offers participatory dancing in a variety of styles: contra, French quadrilles, Cape Breton, and free-style. The sessions tent brings musicians from the same traditions together to share tunes in impromptu performances.

Great food, artisans, and crafts

Adding to the festive atmosphere is work by area artisans. Vendors will be offering herbal bodycare, honey products, Russian hand-made crafts, jewelry, knitwear, violins, products made in Scotland, baskets, pickles, jams, and dulcimers.

An array of great food is offered by Randolph area restaurants, caterers and local non-profit organizations, available in the main food tent and in booths along the street and near the sessions tent. You can buy beer from Otter Creek and wine from Grandview Wineries. Enjoy everything from burgers and pulled pork, to rice and black beans, falafel, Mexican food, and roasted corn & veggies. There wil be fruit plates, pie slices, shortcakes, pastries, maple cotton candy, and of course, pizza slices and French fries! Beverages include strawberry lemonade, sodas, fruit juices, coffee, iced teas, bubble teas, and mango lassis!

The festival is an all-volunteer event. Even Kevin Dunwoody, the Festival's music director for all of its 21 years, works for no pay. Chandler Executive Director Becky McMeekin praises Dunwoody's efforts. "Kevin has built an incredible network of musicians over the years, and the seeds of many new artistic collaborations have been planted at the festival. Patrons trust that he will put together a terrific line-up featuring both new and established musicians."

Volunteers are still needed for this year's festival. Interested persons, age 12 or older, are asked to contact the festival's information call (802) 728-9878.

Horse and Rider Welcome at Three Stallion Inn

by Charles Sutton

It is not unusual today to see vehicles on Vermont roads hauling horses to and from the various horse shows. Joining them too, are a growing number of vacationers who bring their horses with them, maybe to be in a show, or maybe to ride on some of the state's many inviting woodland or forest trails. But who takes in horses?

One destination is the horse-friendly Three Stallion Inn in Randolph in central Vermont, with its own 18 miles of well-groomed horseback riding trails through woods and open fields. The inn offers eight well-maintained indoors horse stalls, a riding ring and fenced pastures.

The inn, located on the 1,300-acre former Green Mountain Stock Farm property has quite a history with horses. It was one of Vermont's major breeding centers for Morgan horses from 1927 to 1962.

Home to the Lippitt Morgan horse

When Sam Sammis and his wife Jinny bought the property in 1971 the farm house and remaining buildings, vacant for years, were in disrepair, the horses were long gone. During the 1970s the inn was renovated and fixed up initially to service a girls' horseback riding camp.

Also, during the 1970s the inn and its facilities hosted the Lippitt Morgan Horse Show, named after Green Mountain Stock Farm founder Robert Lippitt Knight, who developed the Lippitt line of Morgan horses known for their strength of character, versatility and endurance.

The main building at the stock farm housed horse-breeder Knight's pine-paneled office. A story passed down about Knight relates that when he had someone who wanted to buy a horse, he'd invite them into his office and they would negotiate a price over a cigar and brandy with a cheerful fire burning in the fireplace. In addition to horses Knight sold and traded a large variety of horse carriages. There also was an extensive library of books on horses.

Excellent accommodations for horse and rider

For those who bring a horse for a trail riding vacation there today, the inn offers a special package of $150 per night, double occupancy, plus a stall for the horse. An additional horse can be boarded for an extra $25. There are veterinarians and farriers in the area if needed.

Guests have use of all inn amenities including the fitness center, swimming pool, hot tub, and tennis courts. A continental breakfast is served or guests can have a full breakfast at The Depot Restaurant, former CNRR train Station..

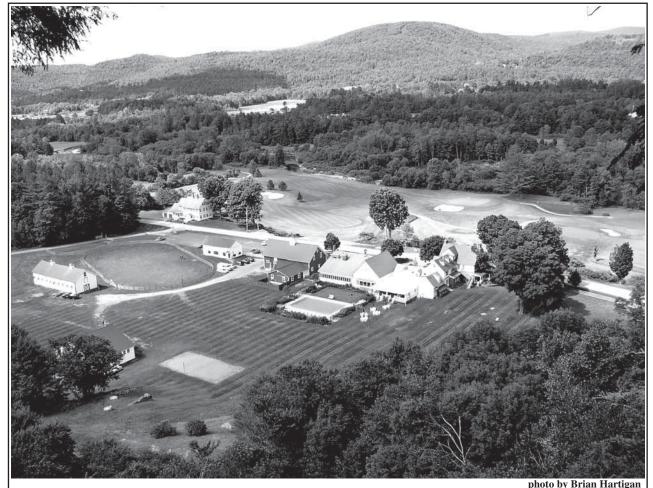

Jinny Sammis, an avid horseback rider, recommends the best place to go after riding the inn's trails, is the Mt. Tom trail system in Woodstock, VT maintained by the Rockefeller Foundation for Billings Farm. No fee is charged. And she adds: "The system includes hiking, cross country skiing, carriage driving and of course horseback riding." Its many trails are very wide, dry, gravel carriage roads, with no real water crossings.

The inn also has recommendations for other riding trails in the area as well as stables where guests can rent horses.

Area equine events

Jinny said of particular interest this summer to horse lovers is the 59th Annual Open Horse Show of the Mid-State Riding Club to be held August 11 at its grounds on Rt. 12 just north of Randolph.

The non-profit club has activities for people of all ages and experience with fun classes (stick horse, costumes and games) as well as traditional competitions. Its goal is equinerelated fun and education with a slogan "Horsin' around to get where we want to go!"

Three Stallion Inn and the Green Mountain Stock Farm offer many miles of trails for riding.

In late July the Mid State Riding Club and The Three Stallion Inn host an American Competitive Trail Horse Association (ACTHA) ride where the terrain offers the required difficulties for rider and horse.

For a weekend of watching Lippitt Morgans compete, plan to attend the 39th Annual Lippitt Country Show, August 16-18 at the Tunbridge Fairgrounds in Tunbridge, VT.

This will be an old-fashioned horse show, featuring the Lippitt Morgan horse. Classes include in-hand, English, Western, jumping, trail, costume, stick horse, races and much more. (For information call (802) 235-2264.)

The club notes there are only about 2,000 Lippitt Morgan horses in the entire country and they all are related to Justin Morgan's stallion "Figure" from Randolph.

Morgan horse owners are encouraged to bring their Morgans or just come as a visitor and watch the Morgan Mile Trotting Races starting at 1 p.m. September 7 along the famous Morgan Mile road in Brookfield, VT. This race follows a tradition started in 1796 where a Morgan race took place on the Morgan Mile when the famous Morgan "Figure" raced down this old Vermont road, easily beating out two New York running horses.

Organizer Dennis Tatro and The Vermont Morgan Horse Association will have two Morgan trotters race at a time, either at a trot, under saddle or in harness. (For information call (802) 763-2516).

Without a horse, there's plenty of equine enjoyment in Vermont. When you drive around you may notice a sign of the times-there seem to be fewer cows, but many more horses!

The Three Stallion Inn is located at 665 Stock farm Rd, off Rt. 66 near I-89, exit 4, in Randolph, VT. For further information or to arrange a stay call (800) 424-5575, e-mail tsi@3stallioninn.com or visit www.3stallioninn.com.

— Peacham Acoustic Music Festival —

Welcome to the Peacham Acoustic Music Festival taking place on August 16 & 17, 2013.

The Peacham Acoustic Music Festival is a blend of the old and the new-roots music from the Celtic traditions, old time fiddle tunes, and a touch of blues and bluegrass. There are two great contra dances, and Saturday includes workshops, jam sessions, and a craft fair with family tent for the kids. We strive to provide the finest in local and national talent—a who's who of the people that will lead our concerts, workshops, jam sessions and dance! Check out our website for bios and links.

The Peacham Acoustic Music Festival includes workshops to please every musical palate. For more information, please contact Jean Dedam, Workshop Coordinator at (802) 592-3176 or email jeandedam@fairpoint.net.

Matthew Skoller & Bill Sims Jr. will be playing the blues. Bob Amos & Catamount Crossing featuring Sarah Amos perform Americana music. Atlantic Crossing will be there with their popular Celtic tunes. Guthrie's Ghost performs folk, led by David Bernz, a two-time Grammy award winning producer for Pete Seeger. The lineup includes Hope Machine, Amy Fradon, Annie And The Hedonists, Carl Jones, Will Mentor, The Irregulars, Chickweed, Ethan Azarian, Alan Greenleaf and The Doctor, and The Bayley Hazen Boys.

A popular event that challenges the creative soul of musicians of every ability level is the Band Scramble. Throw your name in the hat and get thrown together with three or four other adventurous souls to put together a song or two for presentation during the Saturday afternoon concert.

Note that the festival is rain or shine-the dance and concert venues are indoors.

We are introducing a unique lodging opportunity in Peacham-the Peacham B & B Co-Op-which consists of local residents who have a spare room or two in their home available to visitors attending the festival. For more information contact: Barry Lawson, Housing Coordinator at (802) 592-3632 or lawson384@charter.net.

Peacham is nestled in the corner of Vermont known as the Northeast Kingdom. It is a land of pastoral beauty and gently rolling hills. There are many summertime diversions with lakes and streams for fishing, boating and swimming and the Peacham Pathways trail system..

There is a wonderful mix of the old and new-a lifescape as rooted in New England traditions as the very hills themselves, and yet a place that fosters and inspires independence, creativity and individuality.

Glover, VT Bread and Puppet Presents the Total This&That Circus

The Bread & Puppet Theater in Glover, VT is celebrating its 50th birthday. As well, it marks 23 years of annual Our Domestic Resurrection Circuses in Glover (1975 through 1998), and an additional 13 seasons (1999 through 2012) of weekly circus-pageant programs.

This year, circus and pageant are merged into one even titled the Total This&That Circus. Director and founder Peter Schumann explains: "The extension of the Circus from the gravel-pit amphitheater to the meadow above, normally referred to as Pageant, is now the 'That' part of the This&That Circus, and is wholly integrated into the preceding 'This' part.'

This year's Total This&That Circus features daffodil combat forces battling F-35s & other evils, but also provides appropriate funeral services for the victims.

North Country Book News

What Makes a Book Valuable?

by Donna Howard

Vermont Antiquarian Booksellers Association

a question that cannot be answered quickly or easily. Ultimately, the law of supply and demand determine the value of a book. Many books have primarily sentimental value, such as family bibles: They may be valuable to an individual because they have been in a family for generations, but they rarely have much monetary value. Some books, however, are genuinely valuable and collectible.

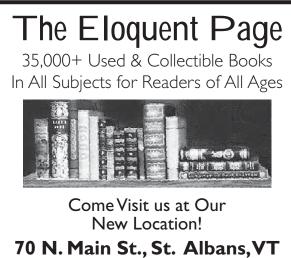

While several qualities affect the value of a book, the most important is content. Few people have any interest in 1970s medical textbooks, while there are many collectors for medical textbooks from the 1500-1600s. Textbooks from the 1970s are simply out-of-date, of no interest to historians and unusable by modern students. Textbooks from the 1500s, on the other hand, are part of the history of medicine. It is possibly that in another 500 years, those 1970s textbooks will be valued as part of the medical history of the 20th century but right now they are usually recycled for their paper content.

Content, age, and condition

However important, significant or valuable the content of a book, without a market a book will languish. Age is not necessarily important, although books from the 1600s and earlier always hold some value. Some authors are recognized as significant, but without a lot of collectors the prices will stay low. Location matters-books sell for more at speciality shows or in New York City than a small open shop in rural Vermont, unless the book is of local interest at that store. The sale price of most books will be strongly affected by the changes in collectors' interests.

The value of any book will be changed by its condition. Most collectors want not just good copies but fine copies, where the book and its dust jacket look like they just came from the publisher. Any flaws decrease the value, often dramatically. Some collectors may be willing to accept a less than perfect copy if the book is scarce enough, or if other factors preclude prefect copies. Children's books and

"How much is this book worth?" Unfortunately, this is depression-era books can be extremely hard to find in good condition. On the other hand, a collector in modern first editions will not usually accept a lower condition copy, since so many fine copies are available.

Illustrations increase value

Some books are prized for their illustrations or beautiful bindings. Famous artists such as Walter Crane, Gustav Dore, Dali, Arthur Rackham and Tasha Tudor produced book illustrations which are highly desirable today. Paperbacks from the 20th century can be collected for cover art by Boris Vallejo, Frank Frazetta, and some others. Generally, hardcovers are worth more than paperbacks, and books bound in leather usually command a premium, as do books with particularly attractive bindings. Some bindings, particularly from the Victorian period, were elaborately engraved and decorated, sometimes by famous book artists, and today some artists create one-of a-kind bindings which can sell for high prices as works of art.

Many collectors seek particular editions of a book. Most commonly this is the first published version of a book or the true first edition. To collectors, the term first edition means the first printing of the first edition, although technically it refers to any printing of that edition. There are limited editions, illustrated editions, other special editions, and even some significant paperback editions. Even pirated editions have a small market. Many people collect all books by a particular author, but some "completist" collectors try to purchase every published edition and variant of every book by a particular author!

Who owned this book?

Finally, associations can also affect a book's value. Was a specific copy signed by the author or illustrator? Was it owned by someone notable or famous? These can all have an impact on the desirability or price of a book. It is the hardest value to judge, and depends greatly on the seller and how much they are able to research about that individual copy. Once again, scarcity and the market for a particular type of association will change the value. Some authors sign so many books that an unsigned copy is rarer than a signed one!

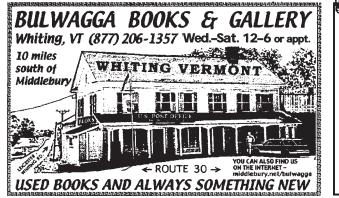

Visit a book fair

To see many different types of collectible books, visit a book show or exhibit. Book shows bring together dozens of dealers selling used and rare books and paper of all types. First editions, children's books, illustrated books, miniature books-whatever the type of book or subject, someone specializes in it. Hundreds of books are on display at a book fair. All are notable in some way. Visiting a fair, browsing, and asking questions of the many dealers there is a good way to learn how to distinguish the many different characteristics of books. In the end, though, a book is worth what someone is willing to pay for it.

It relates the story of how the Italian composer Vivaldi, known as Il Prete Rosso, wrote more than 140 concertos for girl musicians at a state-run orphanage, including the well known and loved piece, The Four Seasons. We would all have wanted to hear the reddressed girl musicians, so finely illustrated here, play his 18th century masterpieces. A CD of the music is included with the book.

The New Horse-Powered Farm

Tools and Systems for the Small-Scale Sustainable Market Grower by Stephen Leslie with forward by Lynn Miller

there is a growing resurgence of small, sus-Northeast. And many are setting aside their time-worn tractors, replacing them with draft horses.

This book tells the story of horse-powered farms that are reemerging today as a viable a wonderful collection of photographs in alternative to highly mechanized factoryfarm system. Work horses had all but disappeared from the American farm scene with the advent of the tractor. In his forward to this timely and remarkable book by Stephen Leslie, Lynn R. Miller, founder and editor of The Small Farm Journal, describes what happened:

Work horses and mules were not phased out, they were pushed out. They were deemed to be in the way of industry and a corporate notion of progress. That was it, the cusp, the very moment in history when we sold out our self reliance and working identity to the devil. It was commerce-driven cultural measuring 26 x 50 feet and 26 x 100

'cleansing.' With the work animals went the biodiversity of plants and animals, elegant multi-crop rotations, the rich fabric of smalltown America, the top soil, the spiritual and economic solvency of a nation, and the knowledge.'

Fortunately we learn through this book's over-view that the tide has turned and small diversified farms have made a comeback. Think of the ever-growing number of farmers markets just here in Vermont.

The author and others who have contributed to this book are exceedingly grateful to the Amish and Mennonite farming communities who kept horse-powered farming alive as their way of life.

They perpetuated a horse-drawn technology (equipment, harness-making, etc.) which is now available to present day farmers. They also provided a pool of experienced teamsters, who have shared their know-how as mentors

In an interesting take on this we learn that post-Soviet Cuba survived an enforced peak-oil crisis by developing a combination of urban gardening and the return to oxenpowered farming. But it wasn't easy for the Cuban government to find a sufficient number of old men who could still remember how to work with oxen, to train the young farmers.

Today the ever-increasing cost of fossil fuels and their damaging effects on the environment are all the more reason for farmers to switch to horse power.

It is not unusual for those of us living in Vermont to sees draft horses being used for carriage, sleigh and hay rides, maple sugar-

Hidden among the back roads of America ing, and being also in the woods for logging. Some may even be keeping a draft horse as a tainable family farms especially in the reminder of how it was done in the old days. Be surprised now to learn in Leslie's 350-page book that draft horses are being harnessed for vegetable production!

Seeing is believing, and this book has color of horses doing just that-working the vegetable patch, be it plowing, cultivating, adding compost or harvesting.

We are taken inside the author's own Cedar Mountain Farm in Hartland, VT where his business comprises a 20-Jersey dairy herd and a four-acre CSA market garden.

As members of the Cobb Hill Ecovillage co-housing, he and his wife Kerry are coowners of 270 acres of farm and forest land. They manage 67 acres of community land: 17 in hay, 35 or so in pasture and the balance in garden and greenhouses.

The farm has high tunnels (hoop houses)

Book Review by Charles Sutton feet. These extend the growing season and almost make the market farm a year-round business. They do not use horses for tillage and cultivation inside the tunnels, but there is a write-up with photographs of the Ruby and Amber's Organic Oasis Farm in Dorena, Oregon, where 11 draft-horse friendly 3,000 square foot hoop houses are used to grow potatoes and other vegetables. "What a joy it is to work the horses in these hoop houses, rain, snow or shine!" says Walt Bernard, farm owner. He also tells us the farm was named after his first team of draft horses.

The author and his wife apply bio-extensive concepts which Anne and Eric Nordell outlined for them to fit the unique circumstances and layout of their farm.

The Nordells, who farm in north-central Pennsylvania, have been an inspiration to many farmers who want to raise vegetables using horses and their methods of intricate rotation and fallow patterns for crops.

The Nordells have articles in the book including one On Using Cows to Make the Most of Your Horses in the Market Garden. "Cows" stands for a four-year rotation of Corn, Oats, Wheat, and Sod.

This book has an encyclopedic amount of information on the use and care and feeding of draft horses, equipment for plowing, seeding, cultivating, and safety measures. We learn about the different breeds of draft horses suitable for small, sustainable farms including draft ponies, the Fjord horse, the Haflinger, mules, and the miniature horse. The author uses Fjords which he says are "highly trainable, nimble and careful with their steps, and possessed with great endurance and "try."

In Vermont's Northeast Kingdom 5th Annual Kingdom Farm and Food Days

August 17th & 18th, 2013

The Fifth Annual Kingdom Farm and Food Days (KFF) takes place in Caledonia and Orleans Counties in Vermont's Northeast Kingdom on August 17th and 18th. It is a celebration of Vermont farms, local foods, gardens, small producers, and agricultural businesses. Workshops, food and tours will be available to all attendees.

Kingdom Farm and Food Days is a collaboration between the Center for an Agricultural Economy (CAE), NOFA-VT, High Mowing Organic Seeds (HMS), Pete's Greens, and the New England Culinary Institute (NECI).

Saturday, August 17th

Join the Center for an Agricultural Economy in Hardwick, VT for a morning caravan tour of regional agricultural organizations.

Go behind the scenes at each individual business. Personalize your tour route by selecting from the list of open farms organized by NOFA-VT. All participating farmers have generously opened their facilities from 8 a.m. to noon for KFF attendees.

Farm demos and activities vary from farm to farm. Ride in a tractor-pulled hay wagon for a tour of the farm production fields at Pete's Greens followed by a walking tour of the processing facility. Learn how the facility works and meets the needs of this four season CSA and wholesale farm. Participation cost is $25.

Sunday, August 18th

Join High Mowing Organic Seeds in Wolcott, VT for a festive day from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tours of the HMS trials field will be led by HMS and Bejo representatives. Workshops for gardeners and growers include: seed saving, herbal gardening, and vegetable fermentation, gleaning with the Vermont Foodbank, a seed swap, children's activities hosted by Lamoille Valley 4-H club.

The New England Culinary Institute is preparing their farm to table showcase meal served in the field, using HMS produce and food donations from area farms. Compare the flavors and textures of vegetable varieties at the tasting station and enjoy fresh fire-roasted corn on the cob.

After dinner, boogie down with the Granite Junction string band followed by a bonfire. All of this days events are free, including the meal.

locally-based, healthy food system. Their Community Food Access Program strives to bridge the gap between healthy, local food and Vermonters through their Food Access Fund, Farm-to-Institution Program, events like Pies for People and Soup for Supper and collecting produce at the Hardwick Farmers' Market. They sponsor learning visits and farm tours. And they run The Vermont Food Venture Center, a full service facility where you can get help with your food-based business from recipe development to processing. For more information visit www.hardwickagriculture.org.

High Mowing Organic Seeds is an independently-owned, farm-based seed company in Wolcott, VT dedicated to supporting sustainable agriculture and providing farmers and gardeners with the highest quality certified organic seed. To learn more go to www.highmowingseeds.com.

New England Culinary Institute is located in Montpelier, VT. It is dedicated to providing a high quality, studentcentered, and career-focused education, which is grounded in culinary arts, baking and pastry arts, and hospitality and restaurant management. Visit www.neci.edu.

The Northeast Organic Farming Association of Vermont is a nonprofit association of farmers, gardeners, and consumers working to promote an economically viable and ecologically sound Vermont food system. They sponsor workshops and conferences and are full of handy resources. For more information go to nofavt.org.

Pete's Greens is a four-season certified organic vegetable farm in Craftsbury, VT. They believe that as more Vermonters eat locally, they will become healthier as communities and as individuals. Vermont Can Feed Itself! Visit www. petesgreens.com.

from The High Tide on the Coast of Lincolnshire

"Cusha, Cusha, Cusha!" calling, Ere the early dews were falling, Farre away I heard her song, "Cusha! Cusha!" all along; Where the reedy Lindis floweth, Floweth, floweth, From the meads where melick groweth Faintly came her milking song— "Cusha! Cusha! Cusha!" calling "For the dews will soon be falling; Leave your meadow grasses mellow, Mellow, mellow; Quit your cowslips, cowslips yellow; Come uppe, Whitefoot, come uppe Lightfoot; Quit the stalks of parsley hollow, Hollow, hollow; Come uppe, Jetty, rise and follow, From the clovers lift your head; Come uppe, Jetty, rise and follow, Jetty, to the milking shed."
